FURTHER CALIFORNIA, OREGON AND UTAH NEWS.

By the Overland Mail.

St. Louis, Monday, Nov. 8.

When the St. Louis overland mail of the 15th of September reached San Francisco the mail via the Isthmus, of the 26th, had not arrived.

Oregon dates of Sept. 22 mention a credited rumor that two noted hostile Indian chiefs, Qualchien and Owen had been captured and shot.

A messenger had arrived at Shasta with dispatches from Port Vancouver for Fort Reading. It was thought the dispatches would change the destination of the troops en route for Oregon and Washington, the forces now there feeling able to keep the Indians in subjection, without additional aid.

The Sacramento Mercury publishes a communication revealing the existence of a project to make a filibuster expedition into Sonora.

The Gazette correspondent of the Republican gives an account of outrages committed on the persons of Mr. Markiv and his daughter, nine years of age, by two Utah Indians on the Spanish Fork. Governor Cumming had demanded the surrender of the offenders through the Indian Agent, Mr. Huse, which was refused. A requisition was then made on General Johnston for a detachment of troops, who proceeded to the scene of the outrage and effected the arrest of the culprits, who were sent to Salt Lake City and placed in the custody of the United States Marshal. One Indian was unintentionally killed, which may lead to further disturbances, in view of which a posse of military has been stationed at Spanish Fork for the protection of the inhabitants.

The District Court of Utah had adjourned till the first Monday in November.

PROBABLY FATAL ACCIDENT TO HON. JOSIAH QUINCY, SR.—ARREST OF CAPTAIN DOBSON—TRIAL OF MUTINEERS.

Boston, Monday, Nov. 8.

Hon. Josiah Quincy, Senior, was seriously injured by being run over in Tremont-street, this afternoon. His injuries are said to be of a fatal character, and fears are entertained that he will not live through the night.

10 P. M.—Mr. Quincy was injured on the back of his head, by being thrown with great force upon the pavement. Both his legs were also run over by the vehicle which came in collision with him. At this hour he is still alive, but with very little prospect of his recovery.

Capt. Dobson, late master of the bark Isla de Cuba, arrived at New-Bedford yesterday, and was immediately arrested and brought to this city for examination, on the charge of being engaged in the Slave-trade. His examination has been assigned for Wednesday.

The trial of Plummer, Carthay, Stanley and Hanks, the mutineers of the New-Bedford ship Junior, commenced to-day in the United States District Court.

Later from Utah.

Leavenworth, Nov. 4, (Via Boonville, Nov. 7.)

The Utah mail arrived on Sunday. Heavy snow-storms are reported at Deer Creek, which had rendered the roads quite impassable for wagons. The mail was packed on mules from the Big Blue, that stream being too high to ford. The rain-storms which have prevailed throughout that section for the past two weeks extended eighty-five miles west of Fort Kearney, and passengers by the mail trains were being left behind. No summary of news is furnished from Salt Lake City.

Interesting from the Belize.

By the arrival of the schooner Mary at New-Orleans, we have advices from the Belize, to Oct. 17,—forty days later.

From a correspondent of the New-Orleans Picayune we learn that some desperate Mexicans had attempted to set fire to the town. In the prosecution of the design, the fire was placed in a cluster of small wooden buildings, at the windward, and where it would have acted as a torch to fire the whole north side of the town, had it not been discovered in time. The party who lit the fire was taken into custody, when, by his confession, the whole matter was brought to light, and the parties were tried, convicted—on undoubted evidence—and sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for ten years, and to be publicly whipped once in each six months during the term.

The failure of the English houses of Hyde, Hogue & Co., and J. Carmichael, had proved extremely disastrous at the Belize. It had paralyzed the town, and business was as dull as death—confidence entirely destroyed, and a bill of exchange on England could not be sold at any price, no matter how good it may be. The houses who are good, and require cash, have it sent out in the packet, and those who wish to remit, send it back by the same vessel—thus losing freight, insurance and interest both ways.

Belize is, and all the season has been, quite healthy; the weather cool and delightful.

When the Mary sailed, there were three American barks in the harbor, loading with mahogany for New-York, viz.: the Carmelo, Hopkins; the D. Jay, Guinn; and the Honduras, Bates. The first was to sail the same week, the second next, and the third the week after.

The provision market—generally supplied from New-Orleans—was not well supplied, but was dull, owing to the scarcity of money and want of confidence.

A Word about Omnibus Drivers.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

As I was coming down this morning in Madison-avenue omnibus No. 874, a little girl (having some bundles, but not such as would incommode other passengers) hailed the omnibus. The driver not stopping, one of the passengers pulled the strap; the driver, however, did not stop till the strap was pulled a second time, the little girl then being out of distance. Upon the driver being told for what he was stopped, he answered, "I don't want no such three-cent customers." Are omnibus drivers to have the privilege of selecting their passengers? Of course, the man's object was to keep the room which the little girl would occupy for a passenger paying full fare, being care of filling his omnibus on account of the hour and the rain. I inclose my card. P.

THE CASE OF WILLIS.

The Broadway Gambling-House Case—Willis Committed and Afterwards Discharged—Spicy Times in Court.

The court-room of Justice Connolly, at the Tombs, was crowded at 10 A. M. yesterday, to hear the decision of the Justice in the case of Robert L. Willis, proprietor of the alleged gambling-house, No. 561 Broadway, charged with having murdered a man in his establishment about a month ago, and throwing the body down the cistern. Mr. Willis was present, accompanied by Mr. Busteed, his counsel. As on the days of the preliminary examination, the bulk of the spectators comprised noted representatives of the "Fancy" interested in the case. Captain De Rivera was among the lookers-on. A delay of nearly an hour occurred in consequence of the magistrate having left the papers containing his decision at his house. The interim—a clerk having been dispatched for the papers—passed in pleasant and agreeable conversation upon various pleasant and agreeable subjects. On the return of the clerk, Mr. Connolly picked out his decision from the mammoth pile of papers and read it, as follows:

JUSTICE CONNOLLY'S DECISION.

Robert L. Willis, the defendant in this case, was arrested on the charge of murder, &c., preferred on the 15th day of October, by Catharine Mulhearn, and there having been three days occupied in the examination, the complainant, Catharine Mulhearn, has been subjected to a very severe and minute cross-examination; besides, we have had the testimony of Dr. James R. Chilton, Ann Mulhearn and Henry Clark (colored.) The facts in the case are very extraordinary, and I have given it the greatest attention. The complainant states that upon Sunday, Sept. 19, 1858, at about 3 o'clock in the night of that day, she was awakened by a loud noise, which proceeded from the lower entry of house No. 561 Broadway. She heard a man say, "For God's sake spare my life and you can do what you please with me," and directly heard the voice of the prisoner say in reply "God d—n the Irish son of a b—h, dump him," and that on the same night she slept with Mrs. Rockliffe and her child in the house of the accused, and that on the next morning she went to the cistern, or rather cess-pool, to empty some water, when she observed a portion of the sleeve of a coat above the water, and that upon going there again on the afternoon of the same day she saw the head and face of a man; besides this, she also says that when she got out of bed on the morning of the occurrence she saw a large quantity of blood in the lower entry of the house, and that Henry Clark (the colored man) was scrubbing it off the walls; that she told her sister of these facts, whereupon she was removed by her to her own house, and she charged her to say nothing about them. It is not denied that she was a servant in the house of the accused, and that she occupied the room stated by her, or that she slept with Mrs. Rockliffe on that night, nor has it been shown that it was impossible for her to have heard, her room, the noise or words spoken, and which she has sworn to. Dr. Chilton, who examined the premises, and analyzed the spots upon the entry wall and beside the cistern or cess-pool, states that he has found them to be stains of blood. Ann Mulhearn, the sister, corroborates her statements in many particulars, and especially swears to seeing stains of blood on the wall in the lower entry, which was pointed out to her by the complainant on the following Thursday, the same evening she took her away. On the contrary, Henry Clark, the colored man, states that he remembers the night of the 19th, and that he was in the house all night, and that they went to bed between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning, and that until immediately before he went to bed there were gentlemen in the parlor, and that he had seen them there before, but did not know their names; he denies washing off any blood next morning from the walls in the entry. This man is a servant in the house; he waits upon the door; he keeps the parlor and upper part of the house in order. It seems he remembers on the 29th of October what hour he went to bed, when he got up, and what he did on the morning of the 19th of September previous; yet although he has been employed at the house of the accused for the last fourteen months, he does not know what business was carried on there. In a serious case of this kind the accused necessarily would use every exertion to contradict the charge, and to explain every doubtful circumstance. He has called no witnesses to do so. Why were not the gentlemen produced whom Clark saw sitting in the parlor until nearly 4 o'clock on the day the murder is said to have been committed? Why are not the names of those persons who were there on that night disclosed? The complaint does not state that there was any blood anywhere else except upon the wall of the lower entry, yet blood has been found upon the fence immediately over the cess-pool, as has been stated by Dr. Chilton. It seems to me very extraordinary, that blood should be found at those two places without any explanation being given for it. It is an unusual place to find such marks, and any accident which would cause them would be apt to attract attention. There are few persons, I think, any—who are so negligent as not to observe that the walls of their halls are daubed with blood, and, if the cause is unknown to them, not to demand an explanation from the servants. What could that blood come from—from a fight? Is not that a circumstance to be remembered? Could it be from killing animals for domestic use? Halls in a house are not the places to exercise such functions. What could cause it? Dr. Chilton thinks the blood could not have been there more than a month, and all this is unexplained. The duty of the magistrate is not to weigh cases of doubtful evidence. The question is not whether the prisoner is guilty, but whether there is a probability in the mind of the magistrate that he is guilty. The rule upon which I must act is laid down by Chitty in clear, though general terms. "If there be," says he, "an express charge of felony upon oath against the prisoner, though his guilt be doubtful, the Justice cannot wholly discharge him, but must commit him." (1 Chitty's Criminal Law, 89.) All the authorities coincide in this doctrine, including our Statutes. certainly expected some witness would have been called to have explained away the suspicious circumstances which surround the case. If no person had been in the house of the accused on that night, I might not have expected it; but when there were, the fact of not calling them appears dubious. Had the counsel for the accused wished me to keep the case open until he could find the gentlemen, I would have done so. When evidence is kept back which can be given, it attaches unfavorable presumptions against the accused. Such conduct can only be attributed to the supposition that the truth would operate against him. Upon considering all the facts in the case, I am compelled to hold the accused to answer.

The moment that Judge Connolly finished reading his decision, Mr. Busteed seized the manuscript from his hand, and a scene ensued:

Mr. Busteed—To say I am surprised at the decision you have just rendered, would be a falsehood. I am not surprised. I can only say this, that it is a decision totally unwarrantable in law.

Judge Connolly—What's that you say? I cannot allow any such remarks.

Mr. Busteed—I say the decision is unwarrantable; it is grossly—

Judge Connolly—I can't hear no speech unless upon a motion—you have already made speeches enough.

Mr. Busteed—Well! I will make a motion then, but you must hear my speech first.

Judge Connolly (emphatically)—I must hear the motion first.

Mr. Busteed (more emphatically)—You shall hear me, and I shall take my own course. It is announced wrongly in the decision that the sister of Catharine, the complainant, corroborates the statement of the latter about finding blood on the wall.

Judge Connolly—You must confine yourself to the record. If you desire again to sum up the case—

Mr. Busteed (deridingly)—No, Sir, not before this Court.

Judge Connolly—I have done my duty, and decided upon the evidence.

Mr. Busteed—I tell you you have not. You have given as testimony what was not given in evidence.

Judge Connolly—You must not dispute me.

Mr. Busteed—I shall do my duty fearlessly, and put myself under no compulsion or restraint.

Judge Connolly—I don't wish to prevent any man from doing his duty.

Mr. Busteed—I insist upon it that there is no evidence to hold Mr. Willis.

Judge Connolly—I cannot listen to your denials and assertions. If you wish to make a motion you can do so, otherwise you must cut short your remarks.

Mr. Busteed—You stated distinctly to me and to the public, that unless more evidence was given, you could not hold Mr. Willis.

Judge Connolly—I said no such thing.

Mr. Busteed—You did say so, and after all the evidence was in.

Judge Connolly—I made no such statement at any time.

Mr. Busteed—I can't go into any colloquial discussion on the matter. The Court has the power on its side, but I shall do my duty in spite of any Court. I know it is a legal maxim that Courts can't err. This Court could never err—no, never.

Judge Connolly—The counsel must refrain from throwing out any insinuations against the Court I have the honor to represent.

Mr. Busteed—I am speaking complimentarily, Sir; highly complimentarily, Sir.

Judge Connolly—I am no wise anxious for such compliments.

Mr. Busteed—Admitting that I am mistaken, and that the errors are all on my side, I think you ought to be satisfied.

Judge Connolly—If you had any reason to suppose that any further testimony you might offer would alter the aspects of the case in favor of Mr. Willis, you ought to have asked for its reopening.

Mr. Busteed—I had no fears, as the Court had said there was no evidence to hold Mr. Willis. If the Court now desires testimony for the defence I am ready (slamming his fist with marked emphasis on the table) to give it now.

Judge Connolly—I will take till 10 o'clock to-morrow morning to decide whether I will reopen the case or not.

Mr. Busteed—Why not open it on the spot?

Judge Connolly—I must take time to consult authorities as to whether I have a right to reopen the case.

Mr. Busteed—What disposition will you make in the meantime of Mr. Willis.

Judge Connolly—Commit him to prison, Sir.

Mr. Busteed (to the Clerk)—Please have a copy of this decision made out at once for me.

Mr. Busteed (to the Justice)—You refuse positively to take our testimony now?

Judge Connolly—I do. I will take the formal examination of Mr. Willis, and close the case for the present.

EXAMINATION OF MR. WILLIS.

Mr. Willis was examined by the magistrate, as follows:

Q.—What is your name? A.—Robert L. Willis.

Q.—How old are you? A.—Thirty-six.

Q.—Where were you born? A.—New-York City.

Q.—Where do you live? A.—No. 561 Broadway.

Q.—What is your occupation? A.—Jewelry business.

Q.—Have you anything to say, and if so, what, relative to the charge here preferred against you? A.—(Through his counsel, Mr. Busteed)—The charge preferred against me is based upon the foul perjury of Catharine Mulhearn, the only witness produced before Justice Connolly, the Police Justice upon whose warrant I was arrested; I have further to say, that material evidence elicited upon the part of the people by the magistrate before whom this examination was suppressed—

Justice Connolly—Hold on; I will not allow any remarks derogatory to the Court.

Mr. Busteed—I am giving the reply of my client, and shall submit to no dictation.

Justice Connolly—I shall hold you responsible for what is said.

Mr. Busteed—You can do so.

Mr. Busteed—(Resuming the reply)—I refer, in this connection, to the fact that the cistern of the house in which it is alleged by Catharine Mulhearn that she saw the head and face of a man, was dragged, examined and emptied by order of that magistrate, and to the fact that Mrs. Rockliffe, who was brought into Court by the same magistrate, and by him placed in the same room with Catharine Mulhearn previous to Catharine's cross-examination, was not put upon the stand by the magistrate, although in his hearing and presence she stated that what Catharine Mulhearn had sworn to was wholly false. In justice to myself I now charge and stand ready to prove upon a proper occasion that the proceedings of the magistrate by which I am held are in violation of my rights and in violation of the laws of the land and against the evidence produced by the people to sustain the accusation here. And in further proof of the truth of my allegations I refer to the fact that Mr. Justice Welsh, of this City, upon the affidavit of Mrs. Rockliffe and upon my testimony before him, issued a warrant for the arrest of the said Catharine upon a charge of perjury upon statements made before Justice Connolly, accusing me of murder. The said Catharine is now in close custody upon that charge as a prisoner. I further state that that examination before Mr. Justice Welsh is still pending, and is to proceed by his order at 3 o'clock.

Mr. Willis signed his examination, and Mr. Busteed stated that he would immediately take steps for the issues of writs of habeas corpus and certiorari to effect his release.

Subsequent to his examination the accused was committed to the Tombs, and in the afternoon was brought before Judge Russell on a writ of certiorari, on the motion of his counsel, Mr. Busteed. The motion was argued in the room of the Court of General Sessions—Mr. Willis, Justice Connolly and a large crowd of Willis' friends being present. The return of Justice Connolly having been read by the Judge, Mr. Busteed made a very earnest speech (to characterize it by no stronger phrase) in opposition to the magisterial decision. He utterly denied that Justice Connolly's return was founded on truth. The whole matter, as far as Justice Connolly was concerned, exhibited magisterial imbecility in its most alarming state, and offered a strong caution to our citizens how they allowed a trust of such an important nature to be deposited in hands so utterly unworthy to receive it.

Justice Connolly, who sat at the District-Attorney's table, interrupted Mr. Busteed, and said that his career would compare favorably with that of the Corporation Counsel's, and he claimed the protection of the Court against such attacks. Judge Russell checked Mr. Busteed, who, in retort, stated that the Mayor had told him that the girl Catharine Mulhearn had come before him (the Mayor) four weeks since, and complained against Willis as the keeper of a gambling-house, and that she did not then make any allusion to the alleged murder. Not succeeding with her complaint against Willis as a gambler, she had since trumped up the story of the murder. Mr. Busteed proceeded to comment upon Mrs. Rockliffe's testimony, which, as he contended, totally falsified that of the girl Catharine. He also dilated on the negro Clark's evidence, which effectually exculpated Mr. Willis from this most terrible charge. Nobody, said the counsel, but an ignorant magistrate would have detained such a witness from his liberty for the worth of such evidence. It was a piece of magisterial imbecility unexampled in the annals of our jurisprudence.

Justice Connolly again arose and asked the protection of the Court.

Judge Russell again checked Mr. Busteed for his intemperate language, and called on the Assistant District-Attorney, Mr. Sedgwick, for his opinion. Mr. Sedgwick deferred to the Judge, merely stating that Justice Connolly had consulted him before making his return, and that he had told the Justice that he must be guided by the apparent worth of the girl Mulhearn's testimony, as she appeared on the stand. Judge Russell remarked that he could not discover, from the perusal of the papers, any corpus delicti. Justice Connolly, addressing the Judge, said that a body had been seen in the cistern. Mr. Busteed vehemently denied that any body had been seen, and said that his report rested solely on the testimony of the servant-girl, which had been impeached by two witnesses. Moreover, the Justice had himself caused the cistern to be dragged, and nothing was discovered there. Mr. Sedgwick remarked, parenthetically, that the dragging had cost the City $27. Finally, after a little more bickering, which, however amusing to the auditory, was rather undignified, the entire case was dismissed, Judge Russell deciding that no evidence had been produced to warrant the further detention of Mr. Willis, and that he must be therefore set at liberty. Mr. Willis was consequently discharged.

Academy of Music.

Certain as the season, comes the passion for Mozart. The "Don Giovanni" excitement is as punctual as it is profitable; and not alone in this City, but everywhere. The vitality which this opera enjoys is wonderful when it is remembered that much of it shows age and concomitant quaintness. The melodies preserve their delicious aroma, and are models of simple grace and tenderness as much now as when they were created. To this fact, and the additional one that Mozart is a venerated name, may be attributed the most praiseworthy art-passion of the musical world. In general respects, too, it is something of a treat to hear "Don Giovanni," for it takes three prima donnas and a full complement of male voices to render it justly.

The casts at the Academy last night was a memorable one, and worthy of the recognition it received at the hands of the public. Such a house we do not often have the pleasure of seeing. Upstairs and down every square foot of ground was occupied.

Piccolomini is unquestionably a delicious Zerlina. Such a brilliant little coquette can only be compared to a poetic fancy, which fascinates but defies analysis. There is a fullness and completeness in the conception which places it, in our estimation, far above any previous effort. Every one can imagine what a little bunch of prettiness Piccolomini would be in Zerlina's gay peasant costume. Far beyond imagination is the distracting flirtation she carries on with the Don, and still more so, the coaxing way she makes it up with poor Masetto, who sees, and sulks, and sings by turns, and behaves absurdly, as any other man would under the circumstances. Ordinarily the Masetto excites the derision of the male portion of the audience. He is obviously weak-minded and vacillating. With Piccolomini as the Zerlina the rustic lover is placed in less disparaging light. He is a victim; a deserving young man, no doubt, but a victim to a process of subjugation which it is clearly impossible to resist. Such a battery of smiles, pouts and pokes as was discharged in the place Batti, Batti, was beyond human endurance. Like a sensible fellow, Masetto makes it up again. We have no recollection of a more charming scene than this with Masetto. Of a wickedder sort, but equally good, was that with the Don in the famous duet La ci Darem. Briefly, the whole performance was fresh, inspiriting and delicious.

Mme. Gazzaniga was superb as Donna Anna. Her excessively difficult scene in the first act was rendered with a tragic earnestness and pathos truly overpowering. This grand artist is heard to decided advantage in "Don Giovanni." Her performance was the theme of general admiration, and bore off the largest share of applause. The large dramatic style which characterizes this lady's efforts gave a new intensity of human woe to the scene in which she narrates her wrongs to Count Ottavio. Mme. Gazzaniga was called out after this fine piece.

Mlle. Gassier made her début in the part of Donna Elvira, and created a favorable impression. The lady has a fine round mezzo-soprano voice, and sings Mozart's music with true perception of its meaning.

Herr Formes' Leporello is on record as one of his best roles; also Signor Gassier's Don. Both gentlemen acted with spirit, but both were laboring under indisposition, and scarcely did justice to their acknowledged powers. Signor Lorenzi as Don Ottavio was excellent. We have not often heard Il mio tesoro sung better.

The performance as a whole was superb, and the getting up of the opera everything that could be desired. The orchestra, under the direction of Mr. Anschütz, was admirable, and the chorus numerically imposing. A number of encores were demanded during the evening, and in consequence the performance did not terminate until a late hour.

City Government and Elections.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Now that the election is over, I should like to offer a few suggestions. One of them perhaps is a measure practicable, and with that one I begin. The Republican Party has succeeded, but what will it gain? Nothing! That is, nothing of its professed object. The object of that Party, I believe, is Reform! Please mark my words—There will be no Reform!

Another suggestion is, that it if not so much a change of men in office that we want as a change of system. A change of men will produce no more effect with our rotten system, than would the substitution of an honest faithful engineer for an inefficient one in the charge of a rotten boiler. Indeed, the effect would be very similar in either case. The good engineer would be blown up with the rotten boiler, and the good politician will be blown up with the rotten system. So I would suggest that we reform the system, though I would by no means be supposed to consider the latter suggestion as at all prophetical. No, Sir, the good time may be coming, but it is not quite yet.

I will wind up what you may call these very extraordinary suggestions, by one perhaps still more extraordinary, to wit: That all quiet respectable citizens should for a future (at present) indefinite period waive their right of voting. In other words, not vote at all. The effect of this will be, that the scoundrels will have the absolute power. The boil will come to a head, and to follow up this rather inelegant simile we will then get at the core of the matter.

It seems to require a great pressure to rouse us from our lethargy. All the pressures hitherto brought to bear have proved utterly ineffectual. But I am still in hopes that good vigorous treatment may remove the disease, and I can conceive of none that would prove so effective as an old-fashioned, bona fide anarchy. A REGULAR RADICAL.

New-York, Monday, Nov. 8, 1858.

[If our correspondent wants any more bona fide anarchy than we have already, he must be very fastidious. We submit his advice to the public. We have very little doubt it will be popular:—it is certainly much more likely to be acted on than any other advice thus far given. Our "quiet, respectable citizens" will consider it a good joke that they should be urged to abstain from voting. They have done nothing else all their lives.]

The City Government—What Can be done to Reform it.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I had put together a few thoughts to offer you for publication when I found the leading ideas I had sketched much better presented in your article on "Our City Affairs" in your paper of Nov. 2. Believing as I do that the City Government is really of much more importance to our own citizens than the question of who shall be President of the United States, and that the great dangers to all our institutions lie in the festering influence of inbred corruption and private peculation, and not in political theories, I think the coming Charter Election more important than the one just closed, or the Presidential campaign of 1860.

Can you not, in addition to what you have said on the subject, lay down some practical point where we shall begin to call together the thousands who only need a concerted opportunity to vote for good men?

The difficulty is, we go to the polls to vote, and find tickets printed for greedy, needy, and sometimes seedy politicians, who have lived by intrigue and their wits until lost to virtue, and if we pick up a man we know suitable, the scattering vote does not tell.

It requires money to hire rooms, to advertise, to print ballots.

If a responsible set of men can be found who will act from right motives, I would gladly give my share of time and money to effect a reform.

The industrious class, who are strangers to the wire-pulling, bargaining and political maneuvering that is done behind the curtain, care and feel, but know not how to act.

These professional gambling politicians feel the public pulse, and give the catch-words and mottoes that mislead honest men. There is, so far as my experience goes, little difference in the amount of corruption in the different parties, but they push forward their men, and the great mass of the voters lose their votes or fall into the snare set for their feet.

I have written too much—more than you will want to read; but please do give us a hint on the plan have referred to in your paper for the benefit of the thousands who would act promptly if they knew how.

Yours, A VOTER AND TAXPAYER.

A Plan for a City Reform Movement.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Fully appreciating your remarks in regard to the coming municipal election, allow me to suggest the best mode of effecting the proposed reform. Let the Times or some well-known citizen call a public meeting, and let that meeting nominate one well-known and reliable person (who has no strong party bias) from each Ward, and let these persons compose a Committee to nominate two persons from each Ward, who, in connection with the first Committee, shall make nominations for the several offices. Let these Committees be composed of men who have reputation for uprightness and integrity; and let them thoroughly examine the character of every proposed candidate from his youth up, and then let them indorse him. Let this Committee publish to the people that the fact of any one, either directly or indirectly, applying for nomination, shall be considered prima facie evidence of his unfitness for office. The Committee can obtain money enough by application to the citizens individually.

This is the plan adopted in San Francisco, and I can heartily recommend it, as it works beautifully there; and no city in the States is more honestly or better governed than the metropolis of the Pacific. She is a pattern for her older sisters.

Yours, C. W. B.

Hackney Cabs—The Systems of London and Paris.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Sir: In my letter, which appears in your journal of this day, there is a misprint which I wish to correct. In alluding to the out-districts of Paris you make me state, "Beyond the barriers of Paris there is an outer circuit—the fortifications—within which, including also that fashionable resort, the Bois de Boulogne, which is still farther removed from the centre, an extra charge—about fifty per cent. more—is allowed." The sentence should read thus: "Beyond the barriers of Paris there is an outer circuit—the fortifications—within which," &c.

I will also take the opportunity of this second communication to add to my previous statement, that upon the back and in the inside of each of the London cabs not only is the official number thereof plainly marked, but the table of fares is given so distinct that "no who rides may read." The driver is also required to be furnished with small cards, having printed thereon his number, name and address, and one of these cards he is compelled to furnish, on demand, to the hirer, or he is liable to a fine for refusal.

The Parisian vehicles contain inside thereof, plainly marked, their numbers and the rates of charges, and the driver is compelled to hand to every person employing him a card upon which is printed a copy of the same, together with his name and address. Another article upon this subject has appeared in your journal since I previously addressed you, in which you make allusion to the cab system adopted at the railway depôts; a few words, therefore, upon the admirable system adopted at all the London railway stations may, perhaps, be interesting. These railway termini being private property, no cabs are allowed to ply for hire therein except such as are duly authorized, and have painted upon their sides the name of the railways within the station of which they are privileged to enter, and a special number. Every driver on leaving the station with "a fare" is compelled to call out his destination to an official of the railway, who enters the same, with the number of the cab, in a book kept for that purpose. Should the passenger, after his arrival at his place of destination, find that he has left anything within the cab, he has thus at once a clue to the same, and so strict are these companies that any driver against whom any complaints may be made to the railway authorities is for the future debarred the privilege of plying for hire within their station. Against the departure side of each railway station is a painted board, upon which is given the fare chargeable to and from the various parts of the metropolis, so that a traveler driving up to the station can at once refer thereto, and ascertain how much he is required to pay. A similar board is also placed in the streets against each cab-stand, giving the rates to and from

Sir: I had not intended to intrude on your space in the question of Cuba, but on reading the communication of "Old Merchant," felt impelled to substantiate your assertion that a "fixed price" is better than a "competition" system, by a picture of a working model. All travelers know that the trouble in experienced in going, e. g., to any hotel in Paris than we have here with our omnibuses.

In London, indeed, "cabbies" often bestow a smile, instead of leer, being the standard, sometimes fleeced; but in Paris, where the "omnibus" and "hour" system prevails, strangers and citizens do not fare so. The form "[illegible]" [illegible] one point in the case explained, whereas, [illegible] sleepings. After entering the cab you receive no [illegible] but on a card from the driver [illegible] say to him, "course" or "hour."

No further words are necessary, and May the "Times" you are driven as speedily as possible to [illegible] nation. In a conversation place one must wait [illegible] placed a fixed price, on which, in [illegible] time, in the length of [illegible] varies slightly with the style of [illegible] or two horses, to cost two or four [illegible] your desired destination, if by the "hour," [illegible] proportion to the time used, returning to [illegible] place for the rate. If by the "course," [illegible] time is necessary than to pay or not [illegible] with two sous per hour: no dealing with the [illegible] man to get possession of your trunk, [illegible] grumbling, as in this illy-governed City, [illegible] petition reigns. The book proprietor is [illegible] by this "fixed" plan so much to the public, [illegible] labor tax a cab had formerly to the owner, [illegible] it if they expected to be longer down. Please [illegible] this subject till we have more space, and you will confer a great benefit on this City, a point that system being an important item. TRAFALGAR.

Senator Hammond and the Colonization Society.

Cosmopolitan Office, New-York, Monday, Nov. 8, 1858.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It is very hard to head off a slanderous report, no matter how originated. The mutiny on board the Regina Cœli last April, reached America through the very unfair channel of French statements, and relying upon these as true, the Press in this country were very severe in their censure of Liberia, and [illegible] manly called upon the friends of Colonization to examine into the matter. The examination has been made, and in the Times and other papers, a full denial published from the highest Liberian authorities.

My object in this communication is to call attention to a passage in the speech of Senator Hammond, of South Carolina, which appeared in the Times on Saturday, Nov. 6, and referrers the principal and most injurious of the slanders above alluded to. Senator Hammond says:

"France buys from the President of Liberia—the far-famed settlement of our Colonization Society—being the colonists, our own emancipated slaves, who, sick of Freedom, prefer their former condition, and in their desperation, do not hesitate to make fellow-citizens patrons in this country the laughing-stock of the whole world."

This is only a highly-colored repetition of the following sentence from the Times' editorial on the weekly number of July 27:

"Liberia is ready to sell its citizens as apprentices to any buyer who offers enough for a cargo."

Now, my dear Sir, what are we to do in cases of such repetitions? To pass them in silence will not do. The noblest schemes of philanthropy can have no hold upon the public sympathy if thus fettered without reply. As many of your readers may remember Senator Hammond's allegations as were made, and may remember the Times' Editorial, may I request a republication of the denials already made on the best authority?

1. The Rev. A. M. Cowan, a very respectable clergyman of the Presbyterian Church in Kentucky, who visited all of Liberia from December, 1857, to February, 1858, on seeing the above charge, wrote:

"I visited every settlement of the Liberian [illegible] three small towns, examining into all matters, and I say, on the honor of a gentleman and the truth of a Christian, that I did not hear that a Liberian had sold himself as an apprentice, nor that the Liberian Government had sold a criminal to the French, or to any other nation, as a slave or for an apprentice. I had frequent conversations with him (President Roberts) on this very subject, of French apprentices, and in the strongest manner he deplored the course of the French Government in this matter."

2. President Benson, in a statement dated Sept. 18, 1858, writes:

"You are at liberty to publish, as false, as decidedly untruths, and that upon the authority and responsibility of the Government of Liberia, the following statements which have appeared in the Times and other papers:

First—That the Chief of Cape Mount accompanied Capt. Sisson to Monrovia, to arrange for the procurement of emigrants.

Second—That the President of Liberia urged Capt. Sisson to procure his emigrants within the jurisdiction of this Republic.

Third—That the President, or the Government of Liberia became a party to a contract to furnish any emigrants whatever.

Fourth—That $1,644 had been received by this Government as passport money.

Fifth—That the emigrants were procured under the immediate superintendency or by the agency of this Government.

Sixth—That any of the emigrants were American Liberians, or persons of color from the United States, or their descendants.

Sir, there is not a particle of truth in any of these assertions. I can prove them all to be downright falsehoods, by more than a hundred living witnesses, and abundant documentary evidence."

That Senator Hammond, who represents a State so hostile to colonization as not even to allow to the privilege of having a vessel bound to Liberia with emigrants touch at Charleston to take a few free educated families—or even to form a colonization Society or hold colonization lectures in her limits—should generally seize upon so foul a calumny does not surprise us. Small evidence is required to convince those whom we dislike. My object is not to convince Senator Hammond, but to lead to the correction of some readers the fact that the statement he makes was crude and hasty original, and has long since been refuted on ample authority.

The Liberian Emigrants, sent to Sierra Leone, may be and all emigrants, have not hesitated to [illegible] willing to the world that they are more grateful for noble exploits. One of the [illegible] tions is a love of freedom and detestation of Slavery and the Slave-trade. Truly yours,

J. B. FINNEY, Cor. Sec. N. Y. C. S.

A Shocking Change.

The Elkton (Md.) Democrat states that [illegible] ing sentence on Lemuel Gibson and [illegible] from Baltimore, convicted before the Cecil County Circuit Court for the robbery committed by them on the farm of General Cummings, and the assault on Mr. Meredith, his overseer, in Harford County, Judge Price addressed the prisoners, in substance, as follows:

"You have been found guilty, by a jury of your country, of two high offences against the laws of the land, and the peace and good order of the State, viz.: burglary and larceny. You headed yourselves together for crime, for robbery and plunder. You deliberately arranged and fitted out, in the City of Baltimore, an expedition to the country for that purpose; and did, at the dead hour of night, attack, rob and plunder the retired and peaceful abode of Mr. Meredith, a worthy and [illegible] citizen of Harford County. For these offences it is necessary that you should be punished, and will be punished, not only because you deserve it, but, also, as a warning to others. I regret that I feel myself obliged, by the duty I owe to the community, to speak to you thus, and to impose upon you a sentence which, no doubt, you will regard, and perhaps many others, as terrible, [illegible] were. But the time has come when, I think, forbearance to such as you are comes to be a virtue; [illegible] examples must be made; when exemplary punishments must be resorted to, at least in the cases of professional and habitual offenders. I do not doubt that more deserving subjects for the severity of punishment can be found than you are. Although young in years, you have by your reputation of being [illegible] you are, old in crime and [illegible] and criminal; being, as we [illegible] should live, by the counsel of his [illegible] ness and vice, and by plundering [illegible] of the honest and industrious; thus [illegible] of God and man. For other crimes [illegible] you are, and have been for many months, [illegible] common rogues and robbers, and banded together for that purpose. Besides this, the frequent [illegible] in our neighborhood, of late, such as you have committed, and the rapid increase of crime generally in our country, admonishes us all that the criminal laws of the land must now be administered with a stronger hand, and more extensive, as you are made to feel its power. Obedience to the laws must be enforced. Life and property, man's home and firesides, must and shall be protected.

The judgment of the Court is, that for the offences of which you have been convicted, you be sent to the penitentiary and confined therein for fourteen years and six months."

The tides on the Hudson still continue very high, and at Poughkeepsie, on Saturday night, the water was higher than it has been for many years. The water was three feet over the docks at Albany on Saturday. In some places in Fulton County, snow lies four inches deep.

[illegible]

[illegible] the people of the [illegible] of certain movements [illegible] submit to you the [illegible] you may give them currency [illegible] the columns of your widely-read newspaper [illegible] comprehension of what I am about to say, I will recall, by way of preface and [illegible] historical facts.

When the young Republic of Columbia, which had commenced her political career under so favorable auspices, became, by the factious spirit of her rulers, split into the three distinct and sovereign States of New-Granada, Venezuela, and Ecuador, her public debt, which had been contracted in her lately-terminated struggle for independence, was assumed in proportionate parts by the three new-created Republics—all the unappropriated land within the borders of Columbia had been pledged to the English bondholders for the payment of this debt. The State of Ecuador comprises a little over one-fifth of the Columbian domain, and contains a corresponding share of the unappropriated lands. Although the [illegible] of the three sister States were [illegible] clearly laid down through their inhabitants, yet there was left, without any surveys or exact division, that immense and fertile region which forms the north-western portion of the Valley of the Amazon. It was stipulated, however, in the act of separation, that each State should be entitled to its proportionate share in this [illegible] public domain. So uncertain were the limits of the Amazon country that, at the time of the disintegration of Columbia, a question of limits relating thereto, had already arisen between Ecuador and the neighboring Republic of Peru, which question until this day has never been settled. Accordingly, to-day there exists an acrimonious boundary dispute between Peru and the Republics that represent the former Columbia; and to make the entanglement complete, an equally bitter dispute, in regard to their respective limits in the same region, among the three sister Republics themselves. A proper and amicable survey, and demarcation of the several portions of each Government has heretofore been impracticable, owing for the most part to the bitterness discord, which with [illegible] of these countries has become almost a normal condition, leaving their short intervals of peace, [illegible] and prosperity of public spirit, but the emptiness of the public exchequer, brought about by long periods of civil strife. Until recently, moreover, the true value of the territory within the disputed lines did not become so startlingly apparent. The idea of its importance has of late been growing up here, owing to the reflex influence of opinion in other countries. For, left to themselves, it is not probable that these governments, in the present condition and navigation of the Amazon country for a thousand years to come. What, for instance, is to be expected of Peru, in the way of colonizing enterprise, when her mines and agriculture exhibit a marked decline within the last twenty years—when she is losing population on, and actually retiring from, her present frontiers—when she, admits her incipient demoralization by sending priests to subsidize, instead of soldiers to subdue, the savages that infest her borders. The Upper Amazon was, accordingly, but lately believed to be a sealed book unto the other nations, and so much the sapient statesmen of those countries expected it would continue, while they went on enacting the masquerade which by stretch of courtesy they would have us term "Republican Government."

It was then the inquisitive spirit of the Anglo-Saxon race, which has by travels, books, and research shed much additional light, within the last ten years, upon this vast tropical region. And although our information, thus far, has not been as ample and extensive as might be desired, yet enough has been learned to awaken the interest of the world, and to excite the jealousy and fear of the various states that claim territory in the valley of the Amazon.

Enough by way of preface to the recent and important facts which have called for this communication.

The Government of Ecuador has not heretofore, it seems, been able to pay even the interest of the large English debt, which, as we have said, was assumed on her legacy from the Republic of Columbia. At length, despairing of ever being able to pay so considerable an amount, and worried by repeated reminders on the part of the English Government, in regard to the same, overtures were made some years since to the bondholders, to extend the debt by a sale or transfer of the largest and richest part of the territory which Ecuador received at the partition of Columbia, in the valley of the Amazon. The sovereignty held by Ecuador over the district thus transferred, would, it was understood, to all practical intents and purposes, lapse, and the bondholders would [illegible] under the protection of the British Government—or, as will be seen at a glance, England would gain, by this simple process, a secure, profitable and sure foothold, in advance of all others, in the very best region of South America. After some time spent in consultation of the matter, the bondholders decided to accept the offer of the Government of Ecuador. Accordingly, a certain Mr. Pricur, acting as agent for the bondholders, came to Quito last year, and after a careful survey and inspection of the territory offered in exchange, ratified with the authorities of Ecuador, a compact bearing date of the December, 1857, whereby the immense and fertile region watered by the Napo, Bobonaza and other tributaries of the Amazon, has passed into the hands of a British corporation. The free navigation of the Amazon and its tributaries is likewise guaranteed to English ships sailing under the English flag.

This contract was not effected without repeated protests on the part of Peru and New Granada, who maintain, firstly, that Ecuador is bartering away lands, the title to which are now matter of pending dispute, and secondly, that—even admitting her title to the district as indisputable—in thus inviting the much-feared Anglo-Saxon race, she is thus endangering the safety of the entire Latin race throughout South America. Indeed, in such a pitch have arrived the controversy and the bad feelings resulting therefrom, that the Government of Ecuador presented, in the last, to Señor Don Juan Gavino, the Peruvian Minister at Quito, his passports. Recent letters from Guayaquil, moreover, state that Ecuador is busily occupied in arming and fortifying in anticipation of hostile demonstrations on the part of her sister Republics.

Meanwhile, the Government at Quito, from the very first, has shown a certain fear, either as to the justice or final result of the rôle it has been enacting. For seven months after the ratification of the contract of sale it was kept secret, and even now, after the principal heads of that contract have been published in the columns of the official gazette, El Seis de Marzo, in March last, Señor Mafua, the present Minister of Foreign Affairs at Quito, acts and talks as if no such contract existed. Such barefaced dissimulation has but one object. That object is to gain time until the steamers, now fitting out in England for the river navigation, have been completed, and the colonists have become quietly and firmly planted on the disputed territory. These steps once taken, a few British men-of-war lying off Callao and Guayaquil will effectually check, if not silence, the lofty complaints of the neighboring Governments.

There are those, it may be added, who assign the present bellicose attitude of Ecuador to the promises held out to her by the Robespiere faction in Peru. It is said here, by persons whose positions and means of knowing ought to create belief in the truth of their data, that Bonavitez, now in exile, counts upon the active assistance of the Linares Government in Bolivia to the south, and upon that of Ecuador to the north, in his projected revolution against Castilla in Peru. It is further said, that in case of success, his Ecuadorian ally will be provided with a [illegible] force in ready money, and by an [illegible] arrangement, on the part of Peru, of the recent land-jobbing transaction.

So much for the effect produced by this business upon the interested Governments in South America. Your first inquiry will be, as will doubtless be that of every intelligent reader, what has been the position taken upon this question by the Government of the United States and its Minister at Quito. Your astonishment will not be greater in hearing, than is my regret in having it to communicate, that the only part taken by our Minister at Quito, Mr. Philo White, seems to have been that of silent acquiescence, or at least indifference to the entire arrangement. Indeed, his course of action has been such that he has from time to time laid himself open to misconceptions on the part of others. Upon one occasion we have the Peruvian Minister suspecting and catechizing him upon some incautious assertions he had hazarded in a certain diplomatic meeting, the tenor of which assertions had raised the impression that he was at least a sympathizing party to the land-jobbing scheme of Mr. Walker Coxe, the English Chargé d'Affaires." Deeming it incumbent on himself to do away with this bad impression, Mr. White writes a letter to Señor Gavino, Peruvian Minister, in which, admitting the conversation alleged, he asks, by implication, to be excused for his indiscretion, on grounds as original as they are piquant in diplomatic correspondence. Here are his own words: "The declarations imputed to the undersigned (Mr. White) with regard to the navigation of the Amazon, were random words casually spoken." Says the Spanish proverb: Quien peca y se enmienda a Dios se encomienda—or, in English, "The confession of a fault is half its amends."

But, if we wish to understand the only possible reason that can be adduced to explain the "masterly inactivity," not to use a stronger term, of our Minister at Quito, it is necessary for us to call to mind that on the 26th of November, 1853, a decree was issued by the Government of Ecuador, whereby the navigation of the waters of the Upper Amazon and its tributaries was declared free and open to all nations. Now, from what has been called out from Mr. White in moments of post prandial hilarity, whilst in company with others of the diplomatic fraternity in Quito, and in dispatches in which he has afterwards deemed it expedient to qualify such chance ebullitions, it seems that he has pinned his faith to this decree, as furnishing a sole and all-sufficient charter to open up the Amazon to American commerce. The very little store set upon this same ordinance by the English Chargé d'Affaires, a thirty years' resident in Ecuador, by the way, ought to have opened our Minister's eyes to its proper value. This decree of 1853 does not advance the interests of American commerce one iota. This will become clear when we take into account that the Government that issued it has rights only over the extreme upper waters of the Amazon, and even in this case its rights are only fractional, since the Governments of Peru, New-Granada and Venezuela claim a community of jurisdiction over the same waters. The little junta governing at Quito of course cannot barter away rights that do not pertain to it. Moreover, whilst the power of Ecuador is very doubtful over the waters of the upper Amazon, in regard to the great body of the Amazon's waters, including its main trunk and estuary, which are contained in Brazil, the decree of '53 is of no value whatever. Of what avail is the concession of a privilege to us which is rendered impracticable by the circumstance that the other States bordering on the Amazon are unwilling to indorse it? Privileges on the upper Amazon! what are they worth, without like privileges on the lower Amazon?

Such at least seems to have been the point of view from which English diplomacy has viewed the question. Accordingly, Her Majesty's diplomatists have all along been striving to win for English trade a surer basis and better privileges than those contained in the flimsy decree of 1853. Their plan of operations was as sagacious as it has been successful. They aimed at nothing less than to establish themselves as a power in the valley of the Amazon; and as such they well knew that they could thenceforth claim all the rights and privileges claimed by any other contiguous State, and that, apart from this, English influence would thenceforth be nearly omnipotent over the other States, in all questions which would arise with respect to the navigation of the Amazon. It was a bold move and has been skillfully played. It at once secures the Amazon country to British influence, and locks the door upon all other nations. One does not know which to admire most, the consummate skill and address manifested by Mr. Walker Coxe, the English Chargé d'Affaires in Quito, in his management of the affair, or the complacent stolidity of our own representative, who seems to have played the part of a lobby member, with respect to the project of his astute compeer, by rendering it all necessary outside assistance.

It would seem that Mr. White's suspicions were lulled throughout by the assurance of Mr. Walker Coxe that the transaction on his part was not an official act as respected the English Government, but merely an act in behalf of an English corporation. It is hardly necessary for us to state that it is precisely by such private companies that England to-day holds some of her fairest possessions. Knowing this fact, Mr. Coxe's assurances of the same purport did not, and has not in the least, allayed the fears of the Ministers of Peru and New-Granada. This taking possession by a chartered company is a modest way to excuse the first inroad into a coveted region. The initial moves are made solely on commercial grounds. At first view the matter appears an emanation from the counting-room, instead of the cabinet. The whole process does not awaken the comment that follows out-and-out annexation; nor does it startle our morality by calling up the catalogue of horrors that an armed occupation is apt to bring to mind. It is a species of conquest, at once philosophical, economical and suitable to a commercial people. Thus it is that England founded her Empire in the East Indies, and thus it is that she has held it until this day. Thus it is that this very year she has laid the foundations of another empire in Central Africa; and thus it is that her far-sighted statesmen are now intent upon establishing their influence in the valley of the Amazon. First go forth the trader and the colonist, who make settlements and raise up trading factories. By and by a Governor is appointed, and soldiers arrive, forts are built, and the previous authorities of the occupied country sink gradually out of view. Other nations have advanced to conquest by the strong arm and with the music of invading armies. England, wiser and more subtle than them all, advances towards her object by petty beginnings, reaches it by gradual encroachments, and grasps it by final usurpation. Her people are essentially commercial, and her conquests bear the stamp, accordingly, of deeply-planned and successful commercial ventures. What the Greeks were in their time are the inhabitants of Great Britain in a still greater degree in turn—a people eminently fitted to found colonies, and to nurture and develop them into powerful States.

Let us not flatter ourselves, then, that the colonization of the Amazon by the English is a chimera, or that it will prove a failure. The steamers of this new "Company of the Indies" are even now being built, and colonists are being recruited. The year 1859 will see the English flag waving on the Amazon, and ere long that noble region will be pouring its spices and its gums, its precious woods and metals, its indigo, its cotton, and the thousand other products of its luxuriant soil into the ample lap of British commerce. Now, in all the world, there is but one other nation, which, by virtue of its instincts, its perseverance and its enterprise, is able to cope with Great Britain for the possession of so grand a prize. It is the United States. A great step has been already taken in advance of us by our ever-alert and grasping rival. Is it too late to redeem the lost ground? We have been tickering for years over a narrow and restrictive navigation, using his experience and [illegible] of great consequence to mariners, his aid in constructing the [illegible] of our merchant marine, [illegible] of [illegible] in all building [illegible] in twelve months what ought to have been spread over ten years, upon [illegible] building, finally [illegible] in bankruptcy, and glut the steamboat market, as it now is!

The Bahamas.

We have files of Nassau papers to the 28th of October.

The Nassau Guardian of the 27th ult., speaking of the effects of the late equinoctials, says:

The late boisterous weather has created an unusual surge on the northern side of Hog Island, across the bar, and along the shore of the western district of New-Providence. The sea has been breaking over Hog Island Point as far as the lighthouse-keeper's residence, forming a complete cataract, and occasionally the billows have risen half as high as the lighthouse itself. The tide rose yesterday to a considerable height, overflowing the western suburbs of Nassau, and occasioning much damage to the buildings along shore.

A brig and schooner have been in the offing since yesterday, and another schooner was signalled to-day without any possibility of crossing the bar.

In speaking of the recent gales, the Bahama Herald, of the 23d of October, says:

"A tremendous sea was thrown up outside, and even in the harbor the fury of the successive blasts was severely felt. Several vessels were driven ashore, and among the rest, the American brig Flora, and the American schooner Fashion, which were both filled. The brig was laden with coffee from San Domingo, and the schooner with lumber and shingles. The captain of the brig has engaged hands to discharge the cargo for the sum of two thousand dollars."

We understand that two persons have been arrested and committed to prison for stealing sundry articles from the American schooner Fashion, which was driven ashore in the late blow as above stated.

The Nassau Herald, of the 16th, has a long article in regard to the proposed new line of steamers by the Messrs. Cunard. We extract the following:

"Mr. Cunard has offered to run a large steamer of ten or twelve hundred tons burden between New-York, Nassau and Havana, instead of the smaller one of four hundred tons, and fifty-horse power, as first proposed. We understand that the larger vessel will have handsome accommodation for passengers. This is a much better arrangement for us than the former one. The smaller vessel would hardly have answered our purpose. The accommodation must have been indifferent, and the probable rate of a steamer driven by so small a power would have presented few attractions to those accustomed to visit the United States in our fast-sailing schooners.

Mr. Cunard's last proposal also secures us another advantage, not provided for in the first instance. The larger steamer is to run to Havana, and thus place us in frequent and regular communication with a large commercial population, whilst at the same time we shall be able to send and receive through Havana, our West India mails as often and as punctually as we have hitherto sent and received them by way of St. Thomas. We have thus an opportunity of obtaining steam communication with New-York without sacrificing direct communication with the West Indies.

In fact, Mr. Cunard's offer gives us a far better chance of steam than we could reasonably have expected, and those among us who may believe that the introduction of this scientific appliance will confer on these communities the commercial and other advantages which in some places it has undeniably drawn after it, will eagerly embrace Mr. Cunard's generous offer. The conditions with which that offer is coupled will not, surely, be any hindrance to its acceptance. We believe that compliance with the first condition, respecting port charges, is already provided for. With respect to the second condition—the erection of a quay at which the steamer may be free of charge at all times, a considerable outlay will be necessary, which can only be voted by the Legislature. But the feeling of the House has always been strongly in favor of steam communication with New-York.

The condition respecting the building of an hotel, by means of which visitors may be attracted to our shores, can only be executed by the efforts of private enterprise. A joint-stock company might be formed for the purpose, or some wealthy individual might profitably invest a portion of his capital in this undertaking, and thus promote his own immediate interests, and at the same time give effect to the views and wishes of the Legislature, and prove a benefactor to his country."

Sir Henry Dryden, a Northampton baronet, (descended from the poet,) has excited a great hubbub among the georgical portion of his neighbors by a cutting sarcasm delivered at a recent meeting of a local agricultural association. The county papers are full of letters in refutation of the alleged libel. The honorable baronet, immediately on the conclusion of the award of prizes, is reported to have expressed his surprise "that there were no cups for twitch, docks, thistles and nettles, the staple commodities of South Northamptonshire. He (Sir Henry) had been through England, Ireland and Scotland, and he must say that South Northamptonshire was the worst farmed and the lowest rented of any part of Her Majesty's dominions."

The health of Sir John Bowring is reported to be failing. The Bishop of Victoria writes that Sir John is involved in a great deal of trouble just now in the internal administration of the Colonial Government. It is likely that the matter may be mooted in the House of Commons. His wife is lately gone to England, having never recovered the effect of the Chinese poisoning. The greatest enemy Sir John Bowring ever had would be melted to pity and sympathy, if he could see the slow but certain progress of sickness and infirmity creeping over him.

A letter has been received from M. Anderssen, of Breslaw, one of the best players in Germany, and the victor in the chess tournament held in London the year of the grand exhibition, stating that he will pass his Christmas holidays in Paris to contend with Mr. Morphy. He intends arriving in the French capital about the 18th December, and will remain a fortnight. It is not, however, certain that the young American player can remain in Paris so late in the year.

The Rev. Stephen Hubbell, of North Stonington, Conn., preached to his old parishioners in Avon, last Sunday week, and the papers say that notwithstanding the prejudices that drove him from the town, because his wife, (a sister of the Rev. A. L. Stone, of Boston,) wrote the book Sunny Side, in which were some hard home hits, "the people manifested a forgiving spirit and gave him a full and respectful house."

On Tuesday night last a number of the citizens of St. Louis, members of the Democratic Party, paid Mr. Wm. Carey Jones the compliment of a serenade. That gentleman married the daughter of the late Col. Benton. To his custody have been intrusted his most important papers, and the preparation of a memoir of his life. It was deemed, therefore, peculiarly appropriate that they should tender him this compliment. Mr. Jones made a speech.

It has transpired that the monetary arrangement come to between the King of Prussia and the Prince Regent is that the King is to draw two-fifths and the Prince three-fifths of the whole of the revenues of the Crown. This will give the Prince an income of about £360,000, and leave £240,000 to the King.

On the 4th inst., Rev. Samuel Were Fisher, recently pastor of a Presbyterian Church at Cincinnati, O., was inducted into office as President of Hamilton College. The address of induction was delivered by the Hon. Horatio Seymour, of Utica. The Rev. Joel Parker, D. D., of New-York, in behalf of the Society of Alumni, delivered the address of welcome.

The citizens of the Hansetown of Bremen are so proud of their lately deceased townsman, the astronomer Olders, who discovered the planets Pallas and Vesta before planets became of common occurrence, that they have commemorated by a grand jubilee the 100th anniversary of his birthday.

On the 13th the clerical papers of Madrid announced the death of the Pope. One journal appeared in mourning, and its college vented their grief in biographical sketches of the deceased Pontiff, over whose grave they poured forth their ejaculations of sorrow and of praise.

The three Washburnes, brothers, in the present House of Representatives, Israel, of the Fifth District of Maine, Elihu B., of the First District of Illinois, and C. C., of the Second District of Wisconsin, are reelected by heavy majorities.

The friends of the Rev. Theodore Parker will be glad to learn that he is recovering rapidly from his recent serious indisposition. He is so far convalescent as to be able to walk out, and he will soon resume his public labors.

Miss Rowena Granice, an actress, had quit her profession and turned authoress. Her book, The Family Gem, is criticized by the Stockton Republican as "a very creditable collection of little stories that are well worth perusing."

The French Consul at Newcastle, (Eng.,) who assaulted the Editor of the Newcastle Daily Express and frightened him with a pistol, has been fined £5 and expenses.

45 BROADWAY, N. Y.

WOULD RESPECTFULLY ANNOUNCE TO JOBBERS and RETAILERS accustomed to purchase FURS in this market, that, according to the very flattering and quite unexpected notice adopted by the Wholesale Manufacturers of this City within the last twelve months, of throwing their stocks open for RETAILING FURPOKES just as soon as the season for consumption arrives, and still continuing the REGULAR RETAILER and even the JOBBER to continue their custom,—they cannot believe either in the

of the same, but, on the contrary, do still believe in the ABILITY OF THE TRADE IN THIS CITY to support at least

ONE STRICTLY WHOLESALE HOUSE.

To this end they now invite the attention of all those in any way interested, to their very complete stock of embracing the richest as well as the most common varieties.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

We have some additional items of news from California, Oregon and Utah by the Overland Mail. A dispatch from Oregon, dated the 23d of September, contains a rumor that two of the most prominent Yakima Indian chiefs have been captured and shot. A messenger from Fort Vancouver had arrived at Olympia, with dispatches destined for Fort Reading, which it was thought would stop the progress of reinforcements, as the troops now in Oregon and Washington consider themselves able to keep the Indians in subjection. From the Sonora correspondent of the St. Louis Republican, we learn of outrages committed by the Utah Indians on the Spanish Fork. Gov. Cummings demanded the surrender of the offenders, but was refused, when a detachment of troops was forwarded by Gen. Johnston, and the arrest of the culprits was effected. One of the Indians was unintentionally killed, which would probably lead to further disturbance.

The Utah Mail arrived at Leavenworth, Kansas, on Monday, bringing the summary of news from Salt Lake City. Heavy snow storms are reported on the route, which rendered the roads quite impassable for wagons, and necessitated the packing of the mails on mules.

Day after to-morrow is the day fixed for the sailing of the first vessel from Mobile with WALKER'S contingent "emigrants," but as the General is at present in Washington, endeavoring to convince the President that the promises taken in his proclamation are all wrong, the sailing will probably be deferred, unless he concludes to stay behind. Indeed, if his going is to be made an excuse for detaining the vessel, he expresses his determination to allow her to proceed without him. He says the passengers have all paid their fare, and act on their own responsibility. This, however, even though it may prevent interference with their sailing, will not be sufficient, probably, to keep them out of harm's way, after they arrive on the Nicaraguan coast. WALKER's efforts to obtain an interview with the President, yesterday, did not meet with success, but he is given to understand that he will be received to-day, though he has assurances from certain quarters that Mr. BUCHANAN will not recede one step from the position taken in his Proclamation.

A new set of officers have been ordered to sail for Aspinwall on the 20th inst., to relieve those at present on duty on board the sloop-of-war St. Mary's. The names of the new officers will be found under the telegraphic head. The entire list of Lieutenants in the Navy is now exhausted—every officer of that rank having been assigned some duty.

Dates from the Belize to Oct. 17 reach us by the way of New-Orleans. Business, owing to the failure of the two leading Central American firms in England, was utterly prostrated. Some Mexican vagrants had been baffled in an attempt to set fire to the town. Three vessels were in port on the 17th ult., loading for New-York with mahogany, and anticipating speedy dispatch. The health of the Belize was good.

Dates from New-Providence to Oct. 28, have reached us. The papers are occupied with the effects of the recent blustering weather, from which American shipping suffered severely with the rest. Two brig [illegible] and the schooner Fashion were driven ashore. The new line of steamers connecting Nassau with New-York, is a topic of leading interest.

The bark Lessingtcher, of Boston, Capt. FAYNE, arrived at this port yesterday having on board, besides her regular crew, the captain, crew and one passenger of the Spanish brig Anna, of Malaga, which she fell in with on the 20th ult. in a sinking condition. Capt. FAYNE sent his boats and took off thirteen persons. The Anna was from St. Johns, New-Brunswick, and is the fourth vessel which foundered in the gale of the 20th Oct., and whose crews were rescued by passing ships.

Over $500,000 of toes and twenties on a bogus bank, designated the "New-England Bank of Fairmount, Maine," are said to have been put in circulation. The bulk of the bills, it is stated, have been scattered over the Western States, and $50,000 disposed of by Wall-street brokers in payment for stocks. One person, a guest at the International Hotel, was detected, yesterday, in passing some of the bills. They are exceedingly well engraved.

[illegible] received in Boston from the Hon. Charles Sumner, state that his health is so far restored as to permit him to leave Aix for Paris. It is also stated, however, on the authority of a New-Bedford correspondent, who visited Mr. SUMNER in Europe, that his system is shattered, and that his recovery is doubtful.

A serious accident occurred yesterday afternoon to the Hon. JONAS QUINCY, Sen., of Boston, which will probably result in his death. He was run over in Tremont-street, the vehicle crushing both his legs, and the head of his hand coming in violent contact with the pavement. He was still alive at 10 o'clock last night.

A movement is on foot in Georgia to obtain the repeal of the clause in the State Constitution prohibiting the importation of slaves—a bill for that purpose having been introduced in the Legislature last week.

The late Master of the bark Isla de Cuba, Capt. [illegible], was arrested yesterday, in New-Bedford, and conveyed to Boston for examination, on the charge of having been engaged in the Slave-trade. His examination is set down for to-morrow.

Two murderers, under sentence of death, to be executed on the 16th of December, named THOMAS MOORE and MICHAEL MCGEARGE, broke Jail at New-City, Rockland County, on Saturday night, and made their escape.

The number of deaths from yellow fever, in New-Orleans last week, was one hundred and thirty-five. The number in Charleston was twelve.

A serious fight took place in the Fourteenth Ward, in Mulberry-street, near Grand, last night, at a primary election, at which a portion of the choice spirits of the Sixth Ward were engaged with those of the Fourteenth, in a primary meeting. Brick-bats, clubs, and knives, were the weapons brought into play. The fight lasted about ten minutes, during which an average of two per minute received divers wounds and contusions. FRANCIS RAMSAY was shot by a pistol in the thigh, and was conveyed to the City Hospital; and a man named JOHNSON was cut seriously. Another man received a heavy blow on the head.

Justice CONNOLLY rendered a decision yesterday in the case of ROBERT L. WILLIS, charged with having murdered a man about a month since in his gambling establishment, No. 501 Broadway. The decision pronounced WILLIS guilty of the alleged murder, and he was ordered to be committed to the Tombs, immediately after hearing the decision. Mr. BOSWORTH, his counsel, had the case transferred before Judge ROSEKRANS, who quashed the proceedings before the Magistrate, on a technical point. The consolidation of Coroner's inquisition, upon a charge of perjury in having, as it alleged, sworn falsely in her testimony touching WILLIS of murder, which was to have taken place yesterday before Justice WELSH, was postponed until Wednesday.

The general markets, yesterday, were heavy for Cotton and active for Flour. Wheat and Corn were in fair request, at strengthening prices. Sugars, Pork and Rice were freely dealt in. Coffee and Molasses were in moderate demand. Freights were inactive.

A New Fillibuster Crusade.

General WALKER seems to have entered sealously and hopefully upon the task of convincing our Government that he has none but the most peaceful purposes in conducting a crusade of emigration upon the shores of Nicaragua. He intends to persuade Mr. BUCHANAN that he has been entirely mistaken in regard to his plans,—that every passenger by his vessel is to pay his own fare, and that nothing whatever is to be done which can infringe our neutrality laws or give just cause of complaint to any foreign power.

WALKER has undoubtedly done everything in his power to disguise his real purpose and evade the provisions of our laws. But he cannot hope to conceal from anybody, and least of all from our Government officers, the fact that he is preparing to renew upon the soil of Nicaragua the bloody and unrighteous crusade which he has already twice attempted. He goes there with no thought or purpose of settling down in peaceful obedience to the Government and laws of the country. He goes to overturn the Government by violence, and to place himself at the head of it. He goes not as an American citizen, but as President of Nicaragua,—expecting to assert the prerogatives and exercise the powers of that position. The present Government of that country has given official notice that no foreigner will be permitted to land there without a passport, duly issued by the Government of his own country and countersigned by the Representative of Nicaragua. WALKER does not pretend that either he or any of his followers have such passports. They have not even applied for them. Yet they cannot deny the right of Nicaragua, as a sovereign power, to impose such restrictions as she may see fit upon the entrance of foreigners upon her soil. Their going in such flagrant disregard of her laws is conclusive evidence of their hostile intent, and will justify the most rigorous measures on her part against them.

Our Washington correspondent sends us the most authentic assurances of the determination of the British Government to aid that of Nicaragua in repelling this invasion, if our own Government should prove unable or unwilling to prevent its departure and landing. We presume special care will be taken to avoid any such interference with American vessels on the high seas as would give us just ground for complaint. We presume that within three leagues of the coast of Nicaragua the sea is subject by international law to the jurisdiction of that country; and that the Government of Nicaragua may call upon any power it chooses to aid in the enforcement of its domestic regulations against lawless invaders. If WALKER's men, therefore, should attempt a landing upon any part of the coast, and should fail upon demand to produce the passports required, they will probably be compelled to submit and withdraw by the British fleet; and we do not see upon what ground our Government can possibly interfere for their protection. In the case of Captain PAULDING it was held by our Government that if his seizure of WALKER upon the soil of Nicaragua was a wrong, that wrong was committed only against the power whose sovereignty had been violated, and that it was for Nicaragua alone to complain of the violation. The same principle would protect the English in a similar interference.

We should regret exceedingly the necessity of English intervention to protect the territory of Nicaragua from invasion on the part of citizens of the United States. We owe it to Nicaragua, to ourselves and to the world, to prevent such a wrong ourselves. But if, through defect of our laws or inefficiency in their execution, we fail in this duty, we shall have no right to complain of its performance by another power.

Railway Management.

The last chance to put the breath of life into at least one-half the railway property in this country, is at hand. A thousand millions of dollars are invested, and as a whole, the investment is on the brink of certain and irreparable loss. The fearful revulsions of the past year, and the evidences of renewed disaster have, therefore, frightened the owners of railways into at least one harmonious conclusion, to wit: That they will reform the abuses which have so long consumed the earnings and wasted the substance of their works. This penitential step has been taken before; and for the simple want of proper direction, it has been the last step. The resolution has frequently been adopted, but no action has followed it. How then shall public sentiment so shape this new-born intention that it will really bring forth reform, and not discourage and postpone it? Random and spasmodic efforts, if they happen to be abortive, will disgust the doubtful, dishearten the sanguine and delay improvement, as they always have done before. If the intention is important, the direction is vital. What then is the specific thing to be done?

Railways, beyond all other things which human enterprise has accomplished, are the direct and legitimate offspring of physical science. When their uses are determined, their location, alignment, gradients, permanent way, locomotives, cars, machinery, tools, and all their working fixtures and moveables, in each stage of their designing, construction, management, repairs and renewals, are successful just so far as they follow known laws of physical science, and abortive so far as they deviate from those laws. Organization, discipline, devotion, integrity, and financial ability are merely the conditions under which physical laws must be obeyed. In short, business talent is the machinery through which engineering knowledge must work. If engineering knowledge without business talent is injurious, business talent without engineering knowledge is fatal. Three-quarters of the cash cost of railways is represented in shapes which all the money and financial talent in Wall-street, unaided, cannot improve. Three-quarters of all the total operating expenses of railways are for mechanical constructions and operations which justify themselves before banks and counting-rooms in an unknown tongue.

It would be very far from our purpose to attempt to disparage the business talent through which railways have led enterprise and civilization into the wilderness, and established the fabric of national wealth upon the broad basis of the national interests. All we mean to say is, that this talent, invaluable in its own sphere, is of no value at all out of it—and that its sphere embraces only part of the requirements of skillful and successful railway management. Worthless and justifiable current, however, they are shrewd, immediate and sound capitalists, practice by themselves the mechanical and chemical laws which govern railway economy. We ought not to expect that all sorts of men, however well they do what they know how to do, should accomplish with infallible success what they have never learned to do at all.

Who, then, shall manage our railways in accordance with the laws of physical science? It is the business of three parties, which are more or less amalgamated—the Executive officers and Employes, the Directors and the Owners. The Officers cannot be estimated as a class; many of them are shamefully ignorant of the first principles of economy; many of them are fully competent to make their roads conspicuous examples of success, and would oftener do it were they not trammeled by the ignorance and incredulity of their superiors. Directors, as a class, are men who deserve credit for something, but not for knowledge of railway economy. Their office entitles them to settle the great commercial questions of the road, and to select competent executive officers; but their chief business should be to keep out of the way of such officers, when selected, if they do not know how to aid them in their legitimate business. Every competent officer and engineer in the country will corroborate this assertion. And it is the duty of the owners of railway property to select Directors who will, above all other things, judiciously appreciate and encourage the reasonable efforts of the few men who really understand the principles of railroad economy. And here it is important to remember that, of the mass of duties which are jumbled under the name of railway management, with reference to their importance and the money involved, three-quarters are purely engineering duties. The others are commercial and legal only.

What state of mind then, on the part of the owners and directors of railways, who, as a class, are not educated in the practical details of railway economy, is necessary to the selection and encouragement of officers and employes who are so educated? Simply this: Confidence in the importance and invariable success of engineering talent;—faith in the ability of tried and proved men to bring forth the legitimate fruits of mechanical, chemical and practical knowledge and skill. These fruits are dividends.

At this point the issue is direct and practical. Confidence like this must rest on a very sure basis. There was never a surer evidence of things not seen than that which speaks from the thousand achievements of engineering talent, with which the civilized world abounds. If the people will examine the proof, they will not fail to intrust their property to the hands which established it. A little attention, observation and reading on their part will deliver railway property from the two greatest calamities which ever befell it, the public's own ignorant interference with officers who know they are right, and can prove it, and the public's false economy in selecting officers who are cheap, whether they are right or not.

One thing is certain, railway property is slipping through the fingers of its owners at a speed which will soon render solicitude and reform too late. Some, perhaps many, of our railways have undoubtedly been constructed under conditions which would never permit them to be profitable. But the greater number have failed to be profitable because they have been badly managed,—because engineering skill and science upon them have been underrated,—because the financial schemes of Directors and Presidents, or the private interests of stockholders and favorite contractors have been allowed to override the conclusions of practical and experienced men, who have studied the whole question as a problem of mathematics, and have reached results which were entitled to a good deal more attention than they have received. Our railways must have more science and less speculation in their management, if they are ever to be saved from the ruin by which they are now menaced.

Abduction a Christian Duty.

The question growing out of the recent abduction of a Jewish child by the Inquisition at Rome, is apt to present some serious difficulties which his Holiness, the Pope, probably never dreamed of when he consented, or was driven by the pressure of priestly opinion to consent, to the forcible separation of MORTARA's boy from his parents. It will be remembered that about two months ago a Jewish family residing in Rome, having missed the youngest of the children, traced it to the custody of the Inquisition. The officers of that institution did not deny possession of the child, but declared their right to retain it, on the ground that the nurse had caused it to be baptized by a Catholic priest. A claim was set up that the sacrament so administered (clandestinely, as far as the views or wishes of the parents were concerned) having constituted the child a Christian, it could not be surrendered into infidel keeping. The boldness of such a claim wanted nothing to make it an important European question but the approval of the Pope; and this, we learn by the America, has been unequivocally expressed. It is stated that in answer to the remonstrances of the French ambassador, the Duc DE GRAMMONT, against this high-handed measure, his Holiness replied that he "could not, in conscience, replace in the path of perdition a soul which had, as though by a miracle, been won for Paradise."

This evasion of the question throws upon the Pope the responsibility of a step which Protestant countries, whose subjects or citizens find their business or their pleasure in Rome, will not be likely to submit to in silence. The miracle by which the soul of MORTARA's child has been won for Paradise, has little of the attributes of a miracle about it; it was simply a breach of trust on the part of the nurse to whom the child was confided. Whether with or without the connivance of a Priest, she broke faith with her employers, by taking their child to the place where, of all others, they would not have had it go for such a purpose. The miracle, if there be any in the matter, can only be seen in the fact that intelligent men could have been found to uphold and assist so evident a wrong.

It may be that the Pope really feels that it would be a dreadful thing to give the child up to the care of Jews, who would instruct it in a religion opposed to that with which baptism is connected. But if such an excuse for child-stealing be maintained in the Mortara case, it may be employed as a precedent for further efforts in this direction, and for the extension of the principle to other residents in Rome. According to Roman Catholic ideas, a soul which is snatched from heresy is also a soul "won for Paradise," and if this "snatching" doctrine is to be a fixed policy with the Inquisition, Protestant families residing in the holy city may be treated similarly with MORTARA's.

It is on this ground, therefore, that England and Prussia, and Sardinia, will be very likely to protest against the action of the Papal Government. It is no longer a question between the Inquisition and the Jew Mortara. The Pope has recognized and approved of the act, and this approval converts the question into one of national policy, concerning which the other European States will doubtless have something to say. If the French Government thought the mere occurrence sufficient for remonstrance, the probability is that the Duc DE GRAMMONT will go a little further than mere remonstrance when the Pope adopts the action of the Inquisition. And the British Government will, doubtless, also move in the matter. Apart from the necessity of protecting Protestant British subjects in Rome from being deprived of their children, through the propagandist tendencies of a nurse, acting, no doubt, under priestly guidance, the Hebrew population of England is numerous and influential, and will be very apt to claim the interference of the Government in the Mortara business. The present non-representation of England at the Vatican will not present any bar to such interference—which can be made through the French Minister, acting in the name of both Governments.

There can be no question that there is much less of real religion than of intolerant zeal in the action of the Inquisition. A parent who is not a criminal has the right to the care and jurisdiction of his children. This is a natural law, with which no divine law whatever clashes. And, although we do not seek to question the sovereign right of the Pope to act in Rome according to the rule and custom in his sovereignty, the civilized world will object to his taking a course, which, being at once inconsistent with right and with public law, may endanger the liberties and the dearest privileges of foreign Jews, Protestant Christians, or Mohammedans visiting his dominions. His Holiness has shown, we think, more of temerity than of either justice or policy in the Mortara affair, and may find, perhaps, that he has opened the door to an interference which may ultimately go beyond the point now involved.

A Quarrel Ended.

Casuists in philanthropy have neglected to decide whether war or the Slave-trade be the darker evil. The question may serve for argument between the Peace and the Abolition Societies; in the meantime we have ample material for deciding whether the former or the repression of the latter be most productive of immediate mischief. It is only a few months ago that upon this issue England and America were at the verge of a quarrel. Since that time the case of the Regina Cœli has barely escaped the celebrity of a casus belli through the prompt recovery of the vessel by its French owners, and to-day a fresh cause of quarrel has only ceased to stir the European waters. A French vessel, the Charles et Georges, was last Autumn exploring the eastern coast of Africa, in pursuit of apprentices for the plantations of the Isle Bourbon. It was fully forewarned of all the requirements of the French decree of 1852, relative to the apprentice system. There were ample provisions on board, clothing and lodgings for the negroes, and an agent appointed by the Ministry of Marine to make sure of the voluntary character of the emigration, and to guarantee every humane attention to the emigrants. M. ROUXEL, the Commander, and M. NICHOLAS CARREL, the Agent, assert that no stipulation of the law failed of faithful reverence. Having received a portion of his load at the Comoro Islands, Capt. ROUXEL steered westward, and, when within sight of the Portuguese settlements in Mozambique, though still upon the high seas, was visited by a Portuguese man-of-war, which, finding the Africans on board, towed the vessel into port as a slaver. All the representations of the French officials proved unavailing. The vessel was sent home a prize to Lisbon, and would, doubtless, have been condemned as such, but for the instant intervention of the French Government. The Imperial Minister at Lisbon, the Marquis DE LISLE, received peremptory instructions to demand not only the restoration of the craft, but a liberal indemnity to its owners, and, moreover, an ample apology for the insult to the French flag in so visiting, searching and seizing a ship that bore it, having besides an authorized agent of the French Government on board, whose presence should have been accepted as security against the possibility of a violation of law.

The Portuguese, of course, tell the story differently; and confiding in their own version, declined at first to do more than release the vessel, and indemnify the owners. They aver that not only was the Charles et Georges within Portuguese waters, but that the negroes had been bought of African Chiefs, precisely as the slaves of other times were bought, and upon their own showing were involuntary emigrants. Assured of these facts, the Portuguese officials held themselves justified in making the seizure, notwithstanding the flag and the agent; and the Portuguese Government takes the same view. As it held firmly to it, the French dispatched, six weeks since, a brace of frigates to the Tagus, by way of intimidation. But the effect of this measure was instantly neutralized by the appearance of two British vessels in the same anchorage; for England, since the old days of the Methuen treaty, has regarded Portugal as an outlying province of its own, and is understood to be its backer against all comers. The English Press, also, embraces the Portuguese presentation of the facts, and pours out its indignation upon the French Foreign Office without restraint. Incensed by this intervention of a third party, the Emperor dispatched other men-of-war to Lisbon, and again demanded indemnity. At this point the Portuguese courage gave way. Doubtless the inopportune arrival at London of Mr. MCLEOD, the British Consul at Mozambique, with his tale of outrage experienced at the hands of the same colonial underlings, furnished a hint that the Court of Lisbon need look for no more English support, and that the wiser course was to submit to the French exaction. Submission has been the result; not as full and satisfactory as might have been extorted, for it appears that it is specifically nominated in the bond as being made to force rather than to right; but still the formal claims to indemnity and the amende have been complied with, and the "princely offspring of BRAGANZA" may live to merit another sonneteering panegyric.

Justice is not probably very seriously violated by this result. There is the best reason to believe that such right as there is in the business has been on the French side. Judged in the light furnished by the conduct of the Portuguese authorities on the African coast, their self-contradiction in testimony and in action, their willingness to escape from the consequences of their interference, by any compromise Captain ROUXEL had to offer; and their hostility to the English zeal for Slave-trade suppression, of which a British Consul was actually on his way home prisoner, [illegible] in assuming the task to side with the Government of [illegible]. If so, the Portuguese were convicted of overhauling, searching and capturing on the high seas a vessel bearing the French colors, unquestionably authentic papers and a commissioned officer of the French Government; a composite wrong not to be lightly excused or patiently borne, and which authorized all the compensation the Emperor has obtained. The French case was perhaps damaged by a refusal to accept of mediation. Otherwise the presumptions were, from the outset, strongly in its favor, and might reasonably attract the sympathy of a people who have suffered, as we have suffered, from this pernicious practice of visit and search. Nor have we any call to commiserate the philanthropy which goes about the world only to stir up embittered international enmities, resulting too frequently in war, that grandest if not the worst of evils. Let the French, therefore, have their demand, though another earthquake engulf Lisbon, and a deluge of Africans pour upon Oceanica.

The Last of the Packet Ships.

What first gave New-York her supremacy as a maritime City was the establishment of regular lines of packet ships, sailing on stated days to Liverpool, London and Havre. The obvious advantages of such an arrangement were so great, that passengers and shippers naturally gave the preference to ships which could be relied on to sail on a certain day; then the owners of these lines were careful to employ none but the most experienced captains, and their ships were as remarkable for their great speed as for their luxurious accommodations and their regularity of sailing. New-York lines soon became proverbial all over the world for their superiority, and New-York became the great commercial entrepôt of the New World. Lines of packets were established to all the principal ports both of Europe and America, and New-York ships became a marvel for their speed, beauty and safety. Almost the entire trade between Europe and the United States was carried on in New-York ships, and even Englishmen always gave the preference to our ships in crossing the Atlantic. As the commerce of the country increased, our packets increased in size and number, and the business of ship-building grew to be one of the most important interests of the City. So numerous had our packet ships become, that the mere demand created by them for all the various branches of the mechanical arts necessary to their construction, was, in itself, sufficient to make New-York the commercial emporium of the New World. The first packet ships were not larger than 350 to 400 tons, but but they continued to increase in size until they grew to the enormous dimensions of 1,500 to 2,000 tons. Boston and Philadelphia strove to emulate the packet system of New-York, and Liverpool and London followed her example, in establishing lines to the British Colonies. But no other city approached New-York in the number and magnificence of her splendid fleet of packets. Every year witnessed the addition of new ships surpassing all former attempts in naval construction. But these splendid successes were not to endure forever. British capitalists had watched with jealousy our maritime growth, and the Government of Great Britain was appealed to for aid in arresting it. And the appeal was not made in vain. The little steamer Sirius, which made her appearance in our harbor twenty years ago, insignificant and unpromising as the stranger appeared, was the harbinger of a change in our maritime affairs which no one could then have anticipated. After the Sirius came other steamers, entailing immense losses upon the proprietors; company after company was organized and their capital sunk; but still England persevered, for she was engaged in a new contest for supremacy on the Ocean. When one company disappeared another came promptly forward to fill the gap, until perseverance was crowned with success, and not only our own steamships, but our boasted packets were fairly beaten where they had enjoyed forty years of unvarying victory. England has at last succeeded in driving nearly all our Atlantic steamships off the Ocean, and she now remains, as of old, the ruler of the seas. She has succeeded, too, in destroying the ship-building interests of this City. The last of the Liverpool or London packets was the Neptune, which was built in 1855, and it is not probable that another of her class will ever be built.

In accomplishing this work, England has gained a greater naval victory than she did at the Nile or Trafalgar, and Britannia may again wave her trident in triumph. Our capitalists and ship-owners were not blind to their interests; they had the sagacity to see that steam was destined to displace canvas on the ocean, and they entered bravely upon the work of competing with England for the supremacy of the Atlantic. But the niggardly policy of our Government gave the advantage to our rival, and, one by one, nearly all our noble steamers have been sacrificed. Our Bremen steamships, our magnificent Collins steamers, and all but two of our Havre steamers, have been compelled to withdraw, while new British lines have been established, and the always-successful Cunarders have been kept on their way rejoicing. The ship-building business of New-York has been transferred to the Clyde and the Mersey. Iron ships are built in Glasgow to ply between New-York and Bremen; between New-York and Hamburg; New-York and Galway; New-York and Glasgow, and New-York and Liverpool; while New-York-built ships are lying idle at our docks.

Now, we know very well that New-York is not alone in suffering from the serious depression of her shipping interests; the owners of sailing ships in Great Britain are making loud complaints that they suffer severely from their ruinous competition with foreign navigation; and it will be seen by reference to an article which we copy from the Liverpool Northern Times, that the iron screw steamship interest is in almost as bad a condition as the sailing ships. We are aware, too, that much of the present distress among the shipping interests is owing to the unhealthy stimulus which was given to ship-building by the California and Australian excitements, and by the war in the Crimea, which created so great a demand for transports, and the commercial revulsions of the last year. But these are temporary causes which will in time be overcome. What New-York has to suffer from is the necessity of building an entirely new class of vessels, for which no provisions whatever have been made. Iron steamships are, hereafter, to be ocean carriers, and we have not yet taken the first step towards making preparation for their construction. Glasgow and Liverpool are so much in advance of us in this respect that it would seem almost hopeless to attempt to compete with them. But we do not despair. It is not in the nature of Americans to acknowledge permanently any superiors, and we have entire faith that when our mechanics shall create a new class of ships, Government will be found to remove all the load which for the time being we have had.

The Records and the Law.

Our legal record this morning contains the details of an occurrence yesterday in the Court of Justice calculated to cause astonishment and provoke comment, not, we fear, of the kind most flattering to our administration of Justice. Justice CONNOLLY has been for some time hearing a case brought before him on a writ of habeas corpus, in which an Irish servant girl, named MULLEADY, charged one WILLIS, keeper of a notorious gambling hell in Broadway, with having murdered a man on the night of the 19th or 20th September. The girl testified to having been awakened in the night by cries of murder, pleading for his life,—to having heard a fall upon the stairs and the wall next day, when a negro servant was then engaged in washing off, and to having seen the corpse of the murdered man in the cellar two days afterwards. She was directly [illegible] by a negro and not contradicted by any other evidence whatever, beyond the fact that [illegible] were found about the wall, which [illegible] to be those of blood. The cellar was [illegible] with whom she slept. [illegible] a statement which the prisoner, in [illegible] at once pronounced to be false, and Justice CONNOLLY refused to allow her to be sworn as a witness on that account! The [illegible] certainly of the slenderest possible kind, and against any man of less determined antecedents than WILLIS, would have had little weight with any one.

Yesterday, however, Justice CONNOLLY was fit to hold WILLIS for trial,—and, upon his pronouncing that decision, Mr. BOSWORTH, counsel for WILLIS, protested against it in terms and in a manner not often witnessed, we fear, in a Court of Justice in any country where legal tribunals are held in the least respect. He immediately went before Judge ROSEKRANS, who seems to be the unfailing last resort for criminals in extremity, and applied for the release of his client. In that Court he encountered Justice CONNOLLY with an indecent violence of language, against which even Judge ROSEKRANS felt constrained to protest, but which he did nothing whatever to restrain. The argument in the end became a wrangle between BOSWORTH and CONNOLLY, in which Judge ROSEKRANS considerately interposed. Judge R. finally announced the decision of the Justice, decided that the evidence—not one word of which, so far as appears, he had heard given,—was [illegible], and ordered WILLIS to be not at liberty [illegible] the whole case ended.

We are not inclined to question the essential equity of the result. We certainly can find in the published testimony no evidence sufficient to fasten upon WILLIS the imputation of having committed a murder. But it will strike the public at large as a curious anomaly in judicial proceedings that one Court is to go patiently through the investigation of a case of this kind, and that its decision may be summarily set aside by another Court without taking a particle of testimony or hearing anything on the case but a heated, intemperate harangue from the hired counsel of the party accused. Judicial proceedings lose all their dignity, and cease to command public respect, when they are thus brought into conflict, and especially when the license of the Bar is allowed to quite a range in denouncing the character and capacity of the Bench.

The Championship of Chess.

Mr. MORPHY, whose achievements in chess have recently been startling both the New and Old Worlds, appears to have almost finished his work in Europe. There is scarcely anybody left to engage with him. Excellent players of the right royal game are in abundance. Brilliant players are as plentiful and plentiful as "leaves in Vale Ombrosa." But it has been shown that few leaves are to be found there, if we use the simile in its generally accepted sense. The extraordinary players are by no means numerous in Europe. But it would seem to require more than a good, a brilliant, or even an extraordinary player, to compete with Mr. MORPHY. The American player has met the European champions whenever he could get them to face him. He has taken them singly and in lots, on gros of an detail, by wholesale and retail, and has demolished them all—we may say, all except STAUNTON, the great English champion. Him only of all the illustrious chess-players of the World has MORPHY not beaten, and we hope that it is not American vanity which makes us add—that it is him only that MORPHY has not succeeded in beating. This little beast will perhaps be pardoned when it is remembered that HANEWINKEL has beaten STAUNTON, and MORPHY has beaten HANEWINKEL. Now, must it be forgotten that MORPHY has done his best to bring STAUNTON to a game, but without effect. STAUNTON, fortunately for Mr. STAUNTON, (or for Mr. MORPHY, as the reader may please to take it,) feel that the English champion's engagements are of a nature to prevent his playing a match at this time with Mr. MORPHY. He yesterday published Mr. STAUNTON's reply to Mr. MORPHY's repeated challenge—and the [illegible] though an admirable example of the [illegible] will, we fear, improve many persons with the opinion that there is just the smallest possible [illegible] of a "back down" wrapped up in Mr. STAUNTON's pretty language and very [illegible] style. Mr. STAUNTON is there informed that "by no means does he [illegible] ing up a great work on which I am engaged, subjecting the publishers to the loss of thousands, and myself to an action for a breach of contract, unless I obtain time for the match." This language is rather complimentary than otherwise to Mr. MORPHY. The admission that Mr. STAUNTON could not, without such a sacrifice, play a match of chess with a man who makes nothing of playing eight matches at a time, conveys, as delicately as language can do it, Mr. STAUNTON's idea of Mr. MORPHY's powers. It even suggests whether, if the American player has been beaten in Paris, the English player might not have found time for the match and his other engagements too. We think MORPHY may come home now.

We are glad to notice that arrangements are being made to present Mr. MORPHY on his return with a testimonial in the name of all the Chess Clubs in this country. He deserves such a mark of appreciation, and we trust the suggestion will be carried out. Let it be done handsomely, however, and without the vulgar accompaniments of a public dinner and speechifying accompanies have usually on this side of the water. We doubt not that such a testimonial will be most cordially entertained by Mr. MORPHY as the courtesy of the Chess Clubs will be appreciated by the public. It is the best pleasing part of the intelligence which reaches us concerning Mr. MORPHY's visit to Europe, that he is everywhere received with the warmest marks of welcome and appreciation.

THE CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE.—Mr. ROWE has issued the Prospectus of his Congressional Globe for the coming Session of Congress. The debates of every day are to be published in the daily Globe the next morning when they do not exceed forty-five columns, when they do, we suggest to Mr. ROWE the propriety of sparing the public the infliction, or, at all events, of leaving the members to publish them at their own expense. The Globe is the best possible record of everything relating to the Congressional Government, a history of the country, and to be [illegible] in public libraries and public men. It is [illegible] for twenty-five, or in fact for twenty-five [illegible] at the low price of $6. We believe it would be a good deal better for the country and for Congress if the full, and official report of the debates were published. But it would tend to diminish the number of political and party harangues, now [illegible] the time of Congress and paid for under the guise of public duties. But as the reports are to be published, they certainly ought to be better done than they are by Mr. RIVES. The Globe and Appendix for each Session makes nearly 3,000 pages.

A REMARKABLE OPINION.—The Message of Governor BROWN, of Georgia, delivered in the Legislature last week, entirely cooks Abolitionists, Northern Democrats," and "reasonable compromisers." The Governor of Georgia evidently sleeps soundly in his bed, and is at ease in his mind, unmolested by the machinations of Abolition agitators or disturbed by the threats of Union-saviors. It is so rare an event for a Message of a Southern Governor to utter a word of complaint of the State, that the fact is [illegible]

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

[illegible] Ward Democratic primary election for delegates to the Democratic Convention to nominate Ward and City officers, assembled last night, in a [illegible] fight in the Fourteenth Ward between the friends of the rival candidates for Committee of the Fourth District. Thomas R. Ransom, a member of No. 40 Engine, was one of the candidates, and Mike [illegible], the rival candidate of the Dead Rabbit crowd. The friends of each party rallied in strong force at Ransom's, a low resort in Mott-street, and at O'Connor's, in Mulberry-street, where the voting commenced at an early hour in the evening, and before the inspectors arrived the box was full of votes. These were all thrown out by the inspectors at Ransom's, and the voting began again. It had proceeded for a short time, when one of Ransom's friends, not liking the drift of the voting, seized the box and made off with it. A general fight now commenced. A pile of bricks which lay opposite the voting-place furnished convenient ammunition, and these flew in all directions. Pistols were also freely used, and several shots were fired. A ball shot Mr. Frank Ramsey, a fireman, in the fleshy part of the thigh, making a serious, but not dangerous wound. A man, named Jennings, who belonged to Ransom's party, met the man who was shot, and a hot altercation and a fierce contest followed. Jennings was struck with a large cheese knife, which cut his head, shoulders, and breast, and badly [illegible] the man carried home to his family. He works [illegible] in Mr. [illegible] Corner-street. The affair lasted only some ten minutes, and was all over before any of the Police arrived upon the ground. No arrests were made, although the man who used the cheese-knife, it is said, was well known to the Police. Mary was conveyed to the Fourth Ward Station. Bartam O'Brien about the same time received a liquor store at No. 76 Mott-street, and after a short altercation with a namesake whose Christian name is Michael, the latter seized a stick of wood and struck Bartam over the head, inflicting an ugly wound, with which the assailed departed, accompanied with some friends to the City Hospital.

[illegible] IN BEHALF OF THE AMERICAN [illegible].—In accordance with a call issued by a number of prominent citizens, such as the Rev. Drs. Cheever, Chapin and Bellows, and Messrs. Wm. Cullen Bryant, John Jay and Fernando Wood, a meeting was convened in the Hall of the Cooper Institute to express sympathy with the North American Indians, and to devise means to put an end to the injuries shown them by the United States Government. The size of the meeting was not at all commensurate with the magnitude of the objects stated in the call or the prominence of the signers—not more than a dozen persons being present in the Hall at any one time. The Rev. Reinard Rees acted as President, and W. F. Freeman, Esq., as Secretary. Mr. Hale, who has spent years and a fortune in endeavoring to ameliorate the condition of the Indians in the Western Territories, made numerous statements to demonstrate that the Indians were capable of being civilized, and that great injustice had been done them. At the conclusion of his address he read a series of resolutions embodying sentiments to the effect that he had himself expressed.

[illegible] was proceeding to take the sense of the meeting when a young gentleman, who proved to be Captain A. E. Fellows, of Salem, Oregon, begged to differ from the sentiments expressed by the speakers. He entered into a detailed history of the Indian wars and campaigns among the Oregon Indians, in some of which he had taken part as volunteer, and after citing numerous instances of the perfidiousness of the Indian tribes, stated it as his deliberate opinion that the efforts of the missionaries among them had not been productive of any good results whatever. Not a single Indian had been converted. They are all drunken vagabonds. (Laughter.)

[illegible] the Rev. W. S. Hill, pastor of the Leight-street Church, followed, and emphatically and effectively to the point, in his remarks. The young gentleman had spoken of missionaries had been laboring 18 years among the Indians and yet they were not converted. He (the speaker) had been laboring eighteen centuries among his uncivilized countrymen and yet many of them are now drunken vagabonds. (Applause.) What men go there with muskets, revolvers and whisky? Are these instruments by which to [illegible] the Indian? Not Mr. H. had been brought up in the land of Penn, and he did not wonder that the Indians should [illegible] Christianity. They have been wronged. Humanity speaks for them in a voice so [illegible] that we must hear it. He would speak with a father's heart and a father's tenderness to the young man who had spoken, never to pull the trigger, but should send a bullet to the brain of the Indian, but to win him over to the love of Christ. (Applause.)

The Rev. A. Rees, who has labored for ten years among the Choctaws, as Principal of the Spencer Academy, followed after the Hon. John C. Spencer, who had spoken statistics to demonstrate the amount of money and labor had been done by the missionaries in the cause of labor.

[illegible] disputed some of Captain Fellows' statements, and moved to read the last resolution, which was seconded by the appointment of a Committee which should take the subjects considered at the meeting into advisement, and report at a future meeting. Colonel Kinney, W. F. Flechner, Dr. Horton, S. R. Powell, Esq., the Rev. Mr. Hall, John Jay, and John Rosson were appointed such Committee. Mr. R. proceeded to say that the hall had been engaged at the rate of a few gentlemen.

Frank Cooper, (interrupting)—You are welcome to the use of the Hall. (Loud applause.)

Dr. Gosz, who has lived for many years among the Indians in the southwestern part of Oregon, followed up the remarks of Messrs. Hale and Rees, and related conversations had with General Scott upon Indian affairs. General Scott acknowledged he was Commander-in-Chief of the Army, but attempted to shift the responsibility by pleading his subordinate rank in the army at Washington. He betrayed an ignorance of the true state of affairs unparalleled in an official. Captain Fellows regretted he had disturbed the harmony of the meeting, but reasserted the truth of his former statements and acknowledged himself personally responsible for them.

After a few remarks by Mr. Hale, the resolutions were passed unanimously, when the meeting adjourned.

A CURIOUS EMIGRATION PROJECT.—A scheme has been set afoot to carry out a Colony of Emigrants from Europe to Celebes in the East India Archipelago, which at present is entirely uncultivated and has never been visited by any European power. The climate is represented as generally mild and very healthy,—the productions, cotton, sugar and rice, grow in great abundance, and the native population are described as a peaceable inoffensive race, who would easily become subjects of the and depth of laborers. In the event of colonization it is said that the island must become the seat of an important native trade; it will be advantageously situated as a coaling station for lines of steamships, running from our Pacific coast to Australia and Indian ports; and great and growing markets for its sugar, coffee and cotton, are near at hand in the ports of Australia. The projector of this enterprise states that he has spent some time in the region; and has carefully matured a plan of emigration and colonization, which he will direct until a settlement is effected. A vessel is provided in which each adult [illegible] passage money, which secures a pro rata interest in the vessel carrying out the company, and a portion of land. It is designed to set sail as soon as possible, in order to arrive in the Indian seat at the commencement of the South-east Monsoon, the most favorable season of the year. The project is a novel one, and seems at first glance too romantic to be likely to succeed. Great Celestine, however, have had beginnings quite as humble as this. It would be a [illegible] region for General Wm. Walker to emigrate to, and it would serve the country as well as himself by his absence in that direction.

[illegible] TRADE.—Our neighbor, the Tribune, [illegible] upon a serious, protracted and able [illegible] of the doctrine, propounded and vindicated by a writer in its columns, that legal marriage is a wrong, and that the relations between the sexes should be left entirely to the will or whim of the parties concerned. The Tribune devotes two columns to the establishment of the opposite position, and lays it down as a principle that a man has no [illegible] over the mother of his children for [illegible] a more attractive person, when her charms and person have been sacrificed to his gratification." We cannot entirely in this opinion—though, [illegible] the whole sentiment of the reasoning and we take issue on the same side, yet do not [illegible] the utility or necessity of entering into a public controversy in regard to it. We can scarcely agree with our neighbor in advising that there should be treatises in every school district, and tracts in every family, upon the chapter of topics to which this discussion relates. Nobody seriously doubts the moral right and necessity of laws regulating the marriage relation, who would be likely to be convinced by argument upon it. There are some principles which may very well be assumed to be universally conceded, and this is one of them.

STARRING EXHIBITION.—A Sparring Exhibition came off at Hoyt's Theatre, in the Bowery, last evening, for the benefit of Aaron Jerra, the trainer of the Benicia Boy, who is currently reported to have lost heavily by the result of the prize fight. Jerra is about to return to England, and his friends devised this benefit as a testimonial, pecuniary and otherwise. The "fancy" were in attendance in large numbers, and seemed to enjoy the proceedings. Among the spectators were a number of pickpockets, one of whom relieved Mr. Billy Mulligan of a diamond breast pin worth $200. A person was arrested in the act of picking a pocket, and conveyed to the Police Office, where he gave his name as James [illegible], from Chatham.

BOGUS COUNTERFEITS.—Now counterfeit [illegible] for the Marine Bank of this City have made their appearance. They are altered from bills of some [illegible] bank. The following is a description of the [illegible]

[illegible] Virginia, a [illegible] man, on a mark overhanging a city, which [illegible] the figure 10 and cuts on the right end; in and the three cuts on the left.

SIX INDEPENDENT CANDIDATES IN NEW-YORK IN COSTA RICA.—In the Spring of this present year Mr. Thomas F. Meagher, accompanied by Don Ramon Paez, of Venezuela, made a visit to Costa Rica, and for several months traveled much through the forests and over the mountains of that quiet but thriving State. The result of their wanderings and powder-[illegible] has been a series of lectures, the first of which was delivered for the first time, last night, in Niblo's Saloon, to a large and highly intelligent audience. Being in the main introductory, Mr. Meagher's discourse dealt chiefly with the geography and resources of the State. Here and there, however, he indulged in a graphic sketch of its social characteristics and political economy. A series of admirable paintings, each copied from sketches taken on the spot by Mr. Paez, were exhibited at appropriate intervals, and contributed in no little degree to the interest of the lecture.

THE GOVERNOR ELECT AT A PUBLIC SCHOOL.—The semi-annual distribution of diplomas at the Female Grammar School No. 5, in the Eighteenth Ward, which took place on Thursday, was attended by Hon. E. D. Morgan, the Governor elect, who, on being introduced by one of the school officers, expressed his great gratification at the perfect system of order and good government under which the school appeared to be flourishing; he said he had always strenuously advocated the cause of public education, and nothing afforded him greater pleasure than to see the success of a system in full operation, which, while a State Senator, he had faithfully labored to establish and promote, and that pleasure was increased in the hope that his future position so generously delegated to him by the suffrages of his fellow-citizens of the State might enable him to advance, even to a greater extent, those sources of knowledge which are the best safeguards of our free and happy institutions. At the conclusion of his remarks, a bouquet was presented to him on behalf of the teachers and pupils by Miss Margaretta Marrow, the Principal. The annual certificates were then presented to the pupils, and brief addresses were made by Mr. Charles G. Munck and J. W. Green, Esq.

THE BOARD OF ALDERMEN.—At the meeting of the Board of Aldermen, last evening, the Committee on Streets reported in favor of concurring with the Councilmen in the repeal of the ordinance to extend Albany-street through Trinity Churchyard. Alderman Boole presented a minority report, and both were laid over. The Committee on Repairs and Supplies presented a report on a recommendation from the Street Commissioner, providing for four new Police Station-houses, and for repairs to those already in use. The expense was calculated at $56,000 for the new buildings, and $58,000 for repairs—total, $114,000. Alderman Tucker opposed the adoption of the report, on the ground that it was not sufficiently clear, and, after some debate, it was lost for want of a constitutional vote; then reconsidered, and laid on the table. It was taken up subsequently, on motion of Alderman Clancy, and, after some additional debate, it was lost again. A communication was received from the Corporation Counsel, stating that the fines for violations of City ordinances collected during October amounted to $294 66. Alderman Tucker moved that the Committee on Railroads be instructed to report, on Thursday next, on the matter of allowing the Hudson River Railroad Company to run small cars on the road. The motion was laid on the table, and the Board adjourned to Thursday.

BOARD OF COUNCILMEN.—The Board of Councilmen met last evening, and after disposing of a little routine business, adjourned to Thursday, in the absence of a quorum.

MORE TROUBLE AT QUARANTINE.—There is a new phase of trouble at Quarantine. The bill of costs for the expenses of the "war" has been presented. The Commissioners of Emigration, through their attorney, Mr. John L. Devlin, has served notice of a complaint against the Board of Supervisors of the County of Richmond, demanding judgment against the defendants, in pursuance of the 428th chapter of the Laws of 1855, entitled "An act to provide for compensating parties whose property may be destroyed in consequence of mobs or riots," for $350,750, together with costs. The plaintiffs found their complaint on the outrages of the 1st and 2d nights of September, when, as they allege, Quarantine property was riotously and violently destroyed to the amount of $350,750, by a mob of 500 persons.

Process has also issued against the members of the Board of Health of Castleton, the charge against them being founded on the resolution, adopted Sept. 1, declaring the Quarantine a nuisance, and ordering it to be abated. The Board of Health is composed of five members, the Justice of the Peace and the Supervisors of the Town of Castleton. Dr. Watson, the Justice, and ex-officio member of the Board, was arrested yesterday. Bail is required in the sum of $300,000 for each person, or $1,500,000 in all.

POLICE COMMISSIONERS.—The Police Commissioners met at 2 P. M. yesterday, General Nye in the Chair. Officer William McDermot, of the Fourth Precinct, was dismissed from the Department for intemperance. Officer Wm. H. Bulmer, of the Fifth Precinct, who was suspended some time since on a charge of landing a boy on an uninhabited island in Long Island Sound, was reinstated. The Board adjourned to Monday next, 2 P. M.

THANKSGIVING DINNER AT THE FIVE POINTS.—The managers of this mission propose to give the children of their Day and Sabbath School, and other destitute ones in the locality, a Thanksgiving dinner on the 16th. The managers also wish, if possible, to present each child with a small gift on Thanksgiving Day, and to aid this charitable design the Rev. A. K. Sandford, No. 61 Park-street, appeals to the public for donations. Those who wish to help the poor children to a good dinner on the approaching holiday are requested to send in their contributions by Tuesday or Wednesday morning.

THE GOULDY FAMILY.—The condition of Charles Gouldy, the youngest of the Thirtieth-street family, was yesterday considered very critical. Dr. Van Buren had removed some depressed portions of the skull, which had caused convulsions. The child was living at a late hour last night. The servants at the Hospital were in a low state last evening; one of them was fast sinking, the side opposite to the wound in the head being wholly paralyzed. Mr. Gouldy's case remains in grave doubt.

A CHARITABLE CONCERT.—The friends of Mr. John Bates, a worthy mechanic who has had the misfortune to lose his eye-sight from an accident, while in the performance of his duties at the Allaire Works, have got up a concert for his benefit at Hope Chapel, on the evening of Friday next, the 12th inst. A large number of very excellent vocal and instrumental performers have volunteered their services, and will make the occasion one of decided attractions. Those persons who would like to combine an evening's entertainment with an act of deserved charity, cannot do better than to attend.

DEPLORABLE CONDITION OF THE NINTH WARD.—A correspondent writes that "a number of citizens of the Ninth Ward" desire to know to whom they are to apply for the reparation of the streets in their Ward. "Hammond-street," says our correspondent, "from Greenwich-avenue to Bleecker-street, in consequence of the immense holes in the pavement, has been impassable for vehicles during the past six weeks." We are further informed that notice of the condition of his Ward has been given to the Mayor and Street Commissioner, without any effect. We recommend our correspondent to place the matter in the hands of the Alderman of his Ward who will probably see it attended to.

POLITICAL MEETINGS.—The preliminary gatherings of those who recognize the Regulars and the People's Committee, as sound Democratic institutions, took place last night, for the purpose of electing delegates to the Charter Conventions.

DEAF MUTES.—The rite of confirmation was administered on Sunday, by the Rev. Mr. Gallaudet, to six deaf-mutes, who were admitted to St. Ann's Church. This Church has now sixty members, thirty of whom are deaf-mutes.

EVENING SCHOOL FOR FEMALES.—A new evening school for females was opened last evening in Ward School No. 36, in Broome-street, near Sheriff. It is free.

DAY-BOATS TO ALBANY.—The day-boats to Albany continue running, and will perform the trips as late into the season as the weather will permit.

LOSS OF A SPANISH BRIG—RESCUE OF THIRTEEN PERSONS.—The bark Lamplighter, Capt. Payne, of Boston, from Trieste, which arrived at this port yesterday, in addition to her regular passengers and crew brought the captain and crew of the Spanish brig Anna, and one passenger named W. G. Ramen—13 in all—who were rescued from that vessel on the 28th of October, in lat. 39° 03', lon. 43°, by the Lamplighter. The Anna belonged to Malaga, to which port she was bound with a cargo of fish from St. Johns, N. F. On the 25th ult. she encountered a heavy gale, in which she sprung a leak, obliging them to throw overboard a part of the cargo. When fallen in with, the Anna was just in a sinking condition. Her officers and crew were promptly transferred on board the Lamplighter. They saved nothing but the vessel's chronometer. This is the fourth vessel already reported, which foundered at sea in the gale of the 25th of October, whose crews were rescued by passing vessels.

MOVEMENTS OF STEAMERS.—The Galway steamer Pacific left, yesterday, with 98 cabin and 136 steerage passengers. Among the former is Madame Lola Montez. The new Hamburg mail steamer Bavaria, of the Hamburg American Packet Company, was to leave Hamburg on the 1st inst., and Southampton on the 4th inst., for New-York. The time for the sailing of the Hermania was fixed for the 15th inst.

MARINE DISASTERS.—The bark Clara, of this port, recently abandoned at sea, part of whose officers and crew were taken in the ship N. B. Stanton, arrived in this city, on Thursday last. Her cargo was insured in this City for $32,000 for the consignees of 625 tons of coal and 250 tons of [illegible], principally steam-coal. The brig Rose Rosier, of New-York, from Cardenas, bound to Portland, with a cargo of sugar and molasses, was [illegible] on Cape Cook on the 4th inst., in a sinking condition, having sprung a leak on the 1st. Vessel and cargo will be a total loss.

LIQUOR-DEALERS VS. AN ALDERMAN.—In September and October, 1857, judgments were obtained, by default, in the Court of Common Pleas, against some forty or fifty liquor-dealers, for selling spirituous liquors on Sunday, contrary to the provisions of the Metropolitan Police Law, which fixes a penalty of $25 for each offense, to be recovered by the District-Attorney, in the name of the people. On Thursday the Police Commissioners sent a communication to Mr. Bosso, the District-Attorney, stating that executions had been issued to the Sheriff on these judgments, but that they were returned unsatisfied. On Saturday Mr. Bosso issued executions under section 298 of the Code, against the persons of the liquor-dealers, and the Sheriff intends to arrest them.

THE STEAMBOAT EXPLOSION.—The Coroner's examination in the case of Henry Bunn, the unfortunate man who was thrown a hundred feet into the air by the explosion of the steam-tug Petrel on Saturday, was set down for yesterday at Bellevue Hospital. Owing to the absence of material witnesses, the inquisition was postponed till to-day. The fireman, Edward Downing, is still at the City Hospital, and in a fair way to recover.

THE LAGER-BIER SALOON HOMICIDE.—The Eighth Ward Police are still actively engaged in trying to discover the man who on Saturday night killed Wm. B. Tompkins at the lager-bier saloon No. 497 Broadway. Two or three arrests have been made on suspicion. Coroner Hills has taken charge of the inquest, but he was unable yesterday to get all the necessary witnesses, and postponed the examination till to-day.

ROBBERY IN A STAGE.—Mr. John Randall was robbed on Friday, in a Dry Dock and Grand-street stage. There were ten men in the stage when he entered. One of them asked him the time of the day, and as he replaced his watch, the man nearest him fell upon him, pretending to be drunk, and the watch (worth $100) was taken from his pocket. Mr. Randall left the stage, but could not find a policeman—so no arrest was made.

KIDNAPPING EMIGRANTS—John Riddle, his wife and their two children, a girl of seventeen and a boy of fifteen, arrived from Scotland two or three days since, landing from an emigrant ship, at Castle Garden. As the family were landing, some designing persons kidnapped the girl and boy. Complaint was made to the Harbor Police, and after a search the missing parties were found in a disreputable house, in the lower part of the City. No arrests were made.

DEATH FROM RAILROAD INJURIES.—Mary Brady, the woman who a few days ago was run against by a Harlem Railroad train, at Fortieth-street, tossed several feet from the track, and severely injured, died yesterday. An inquest was held on the body, and a verdict of "Accidental death" rendered. The deceased was intoxicated, and paid no attention to the whistle.

Police Reports.

EXTENSIVE ISSUE OF BOGUS BILLS—WALL-STREET AND THE WESTERN STATES FLOODED.—Some Wall-street brokers, either designedly or otherwise, have been doing a pretty extensive business with pretended issues of a Maine bank. The bills—they are all of the denomination ten and twenties—bear the impress "New-England Bank," and purport to be issues of a bank bearing this name located at Fairmount in the State of Maine. There is such a town as Fairmount in Maine, but no such banking institution there as that named. The issues are all bogus, and got up in the most approved style of deception. A firm of Wall-street note-engravers is reported to have executed the engraving part of the job, and the amount of bills put in the market is said to be $500,000. Of this large sum the bulk has been taken into the Western States, and $50,000 is said to have been found among the Wall-street brokers in exchange for stocks. The bills are capitally executed, and have been readily taken by the best judges of money, and signed by E. Rittenhouse President, and A. Martin Cashier. A broker named Jackson is quoted as having made way with $15,000 of the money; Mr. Calhoun of No. 19 Exchange-place, as having passed out of his hands $9,000; a Mr. Tompkins $2,000; a Mr. Wood of Pine-street, $1,500, and so on through a long list of names. It is not known yet who the parties are who introduced the bills into the market, and who have issued them with a guilty knowledge. A young man named Jethro Wood Underhill, was arrested yesterday at the International Hotel, who had $400 of the money in his possession. He gave the package of bills on arrival at the hotel in charge of the book-keeper. Yesterday he gave a boy an order on the cashier for $16, in payment for some purchases sent there, and through this circumstance the bogus character of the bills was brought to light. Underhill was taken before Justice Kelly, and held to await examination. He says that he received the money of Mr. Wilcox, broker, of No. 14 Wall-street, in payment for some land in Cumberland County, Pennsylvania.

SIXTH WARD SHOOTING.—Michael Downs and Joseph Gaughan are two promising youths of Celtic descent, and live in the Sixth Ward. They had an altercation yesterday, and Downs ended the matter by shooting Gaughan in the leg. Gaughan was taken to the Hospital, and Downs committed to the Tombs.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

SCENES IN THE COMMON COUNCIL.—There was a near approach to a fight, last evening, in the Brooklyn Common Council. Alderman Douglas reflected severely upon Alderman Van Brunt on account of his action in the matter of an adverse report upon one McLaughlin's petition concerning a grading and paving contract in Classon-avenue. Alderman Van Brunt retorted, accusing Mr. Douglas of falsehood. Douglas rejoined, when Van Brunt seized a book apparently with the intention of throwing it at the head of Mr. Douglas. The latter struck an attitude, defensive not offensive. The Chair called to order, and there was no fight. Another Alderman was aggrieved. Alderman Wehrhey stated that an attempt had been made to intimidate him. The Alderman stated that he did not vote, two weeks ago, on a motion to lay a report in favor of paying the bills of John Barry and J. Marvin, counsel and clerk to the Commissioners on Williamsburg claims; and that Marvin came up to him and observed: "I'll pay you off for this, for not voting." The Alderman considered that the Board had been insulted through him, and he left it to the Board to say what should be done. A Committee of Investigation was appointed.

IMPANELING OF THE GRAND JURY.—The Grand Jury for Kings County was impanelled yesterday forenoon, with John B. Dikeman as foreman. After the oath had been administered, the charge was delivered by Judge Emott, of Poughkeepsie, who will preside at this session of the Circuit Court. The Judge occupied about half an hour in his address, calling special attention to the laws forbidding the sale of lottery tickets; the laws against usury, and against the taking of illegal fees by attorneys and other law officers. Upon the subject of laws protecting elections, the Judge dwelt at some length upon the degeneracy of the public sentiment, which allowed the almost universal practice of buying and bribing votes at our elections. The laws regulating the sale of intoxicating liquors, and punishing their sale without license, as well as the adulteration of liquors, received a passing notice. The present was the last Grand Jury for the year, and their duties, on this account, would be the more onerous.

GAS ON THE FERRY-BOATS.—Gas was introduced on the Fulton Ferry-boats last evening. The Nassau was the first boat lighted, and the effect was good. The gas is obtained from the works of the Brooklyn Gas Light Company, at the same price as charged to private consumers. A hose is attached to the docks to introduce the gas into receptacles prepared for the purpose on the decks of the boats. Thence it is conducted to the engine rooms and distributed into the cabins. The cylinder in the hold is fourteen feet long by four in diameter, lined with galvanic iron. The pressure of gas is one-half pound to the inch.

OPENING OF THE CITY COURTS.—The November term of the City Court commenced its sittings yesterday, and the petit jury was impanneled. Among the 78 cases on the Calendar is one by E. B. Brooks against the City Railroad Company for damages resulting from injuries received several Winters since on a sleigh car.... The Court of Oyer and Terminer met and was organized, but no business was done. The Circuit trials were taken up.

OUTRAGE.—Stephen Lowry, who hails from the receiving-ship North Carolina, and says he belongs to the band on board of that ship, was arrested on Sunday evening upon complaint of William Murray, of No. 182 Prospect-street, for having committed a criminal assault upon the person of his little girl, only 8 years of age. Mayor Powell issued the warrant, and Lowry was arraigned before Judge Cornwell yesterday morning. The offence is alleged to have been committed on the 23d of October, when the mother was temporarily absent from the house; and nothing was known of it until the following Thursday. The mother then drew from the little girl the particulars of the transaction, when she charged Lowry with the offence. He confessed the crime, but alleged that he was drunk at the time, and begged forgiveness. He also offered money to the mother, (so he says,) which she received, promising not to disclose the matter to her husband. Upon learning the facts, however, Mr. Murray went in search of Lowry, to inflict summary chastisement upon him, but, not being able to find him, made the complaint, and had him arrested. Lowry is 53 years of age, and says he was born on board of a man-of-war.

THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—The Board of Supervisors for Kings County met on Saturday at the County Jail. T. G. Bennett presented a petition from the Superintendents of the Poor for an appropriation of $60,000.

It was, on his motion, ordered that the sum of $50,000 be appropriated to the Superintendents of the Poor on Almshouse account, to be paid by the County Treasurer from the monies raised by tax for that purpose.

Bills amounting to $2,102 were favorably reported upon. The tax assessment rolls were presented and warrants issued to the various Supervisors for their collection. After some further business of little moment the Board adjourned to the 1st of December, at 10 o'clock A. M.

A BRIDE LAUNCHED.—Last night, in spite of inclement weather, Miss Mary E. Morris (with of Jesse J. Roach, of Newark, and daughter of the Hon. M. H. Morris, of Newberry, Conn.) was ushered into society distinguished. Fresh her many natural gifts and her admirable use of them, her recent death (Oct. 22) has left a very unusual void in the circle in which she resided. A more beloved person, by kindred and fascinated friends, probably never existed. In her beautiful home on the Hudson she was a rare model of lovely tenderness and goodness. But she is a loss scarce less to society at large than to her own circle and family. With her own musical endowments and her most winning personal loveliness, she had a breadth of human charity and Christian liberality, of which the whole community felt the influence. From this inborn and undeniable superiority, this instinctive nobleness and truthfulness, she became the leader in all the good works of the neighborhood. She was their acknowledged first and best woman, in active charities as well as in graces of mind and person—in the furtherance of liberal public objects as well as in the refinements of home and the hospitalities of the drawing-room. To all classes, Mrs. Morris's death is a loss that will be thought truly irreparable; while, for the relatives and more intimate friends whom she has left, it will be long before she can be mentioned without a tear at the heart. —Home Journal.

Miss Emma Wellis left, on Saturday, in the steamer Vigo, being recalled for a time to Paris by important family business. She will return in February.

DR. HUNTER—NO. 9 DIVISION-ST., THE GREATEST CURE EVER MADE. THE ONLY SECURITY AGAINST DISEASE AND THE EFFECTS OF DISSIPATION IS TO APPLY TO HIS OLD DISPENSARY, NO. 9 DIVISION-ST., NEW-YORK. ESTABLISHED IN 1826.
Dr. HUNTER, No. 9 Division-st., cures in the quickest and most effectual manner, and at a moderate fee, all the diseases of the reproductive system, and particularly of every particular of the sexual system, and the effects of the venereal disease, which is the genuine Hunter's Red Drop, made from the original recipe, in the possession of Dr. HUNTER, and is known by any other person living except Dr. HUNTER, No. 9 Division-st., one door from Bowery, all the services of the many impudent quacks to the contrary notwithstanding. Dr. H. has prepared every kind of medicine and medicines with his own hands that have been known to cure, for the last 32 years, and has never entrusted any living person with the secret, consequently he is overwhelmed daily with applications from those who have tried everything else, and have been cheated by every quack, and by some impudent, black and wicked counterfeit, and set up by some unprincipled wretch that, for the sake of a dollar, would trifle with the lives of his fellow-men.

COBURN'S EXTRA OIL.—VERY SUPERIOR for machinery and burning—burns most brilliantly. Barrels, 30 to 40 gallons.
JOHN W. QUINCY & CO., No. 2 Pine-st.

The annual Message of Governor Brown, of Georgia, treats, in Yankeeism fashion, of all the affairs of the State. It opens with a general view of the Banking system. In December, 1857, the Legislature passed, without Executive sanction, a bill providing against the forfeiture of Bank charters, in consequence of the suspension of specie payments. The bill prohibited the taking of usury by the Banks, and required Bank officers to make sworn returns. The Governor reports that a large majority have refused obedience to this legislation, and recommends the imposition of adequate penalties for disobedience. The Governor then dwells upon the imperfections and abuses of the Banking system of the State, and argues that it should be completely reformed or entirely abolished. He recommends the passage of a law prohibiting the issue or circulation of small notes. He also suggests the expediency of establishing a Sub-Treasury. The public debt of the State amounts to $2,300,000, payable at intervals in twenty years; a large portion of this debt has been incurred on account of the State Road. For its payment the net earnings of the Western and Atlantic Railroad are already pledged, and an act setting apart from this source an annual fund of $100,000 for the redemption, is recommended. Attention is paid to educational interests—the education of teachers is particularly urged. A reduction of taxes is recommended; also, an appropriation for weights and measures. The public institutions are reported as in a comfortable state. A defect in the present code is pointed out, and an amendment of the law is recommended, so as to compel persons convicted of criminal offences to come to trial at the earliest practicable period. A good word is said for the agricultural interest—and not a word is said on behalf of "Federal Relations."

MISSISSIPPI.

Governor McNutt, of Mississippi, writes an elaborate message, winding up with the usual comments on Southern affairs. This is Governor McNutt's first communication to the Legislature. He opens with a gloomy condition of State affairs. The main point dwelt upon in the message is the Railroad system, the importance of which is urged with great earnestness. The levee system is commended to the regards of the Legislature, and agricultural and agricultural survey is in satisfactory progress. The appointment of a Superintendent-in-Chief for the Common Schools is recommended. A report has been made upon the famous Graves defalcation, and the Governor recommends that the money of that fund ($8,043) be disposed of in accordance with the two-per-cent. fund. The charitable institutions are in a flourishing condition. Gov. McWillie appears to have been troubled by certain missives from Texas, of which he says:

"I have received Legislature resolutions from the States of Massachusetts, Maine and New-Hampshire, which are such as you would expect from the quarter, sentiments coming from which they come. I have not acknowledged the receipt of these resolutions, nor will I communicate them to you, unless you may be called upon to do so. Those fanatics have no right to expect these offensive, incendiary and treasonable proceedings to be treated with the ordinary courtesy."

Theological Seminary for America at Rome—Pastoral Letter.

FRANCIS PATRICK KENRICK, By the Grace of God and Favor of the Holy Apostolic See, Archbishop of Baltimore, to the Clergy and Faithful of the Diocese of Baltimore:

Venerable Brethren of the Clergy, and beloved Brethren of the Laity:

With feelings of great satisfaction we announce to you that Our Holy Father the Pope, being anxious to prove his gratitude for the generous sympathy of his children in these United States, in the hour of his trial, and to advance the interests of religion, has set apart a spacious and convenient building in the city of Rome for the education of American youths pursuing their ecclesiastical career. The advantages afforded by the residence in that city, for a thorough and comprehensive study of all that relates to doctrine and discipline, cannot be questioned, since Rome has always been recognized as the school of religion, and our faith flows from which the waters of the pure stream now to all parts of the universe. Peter lives still in the person of his successor, always ready to confirm his brethren in the truth of faith.

The representation of the prelates from all parts of the world with their head, and the action of the various ecclesiastical tribunals in that city, give to the character of a permanent council, which preserves the integrity of doctrine, and directs the government of the Church. Those who have the happiness to be instructed there are likely to receive the most accurate and the most enlarged views, free from the disturbing influences of local prejudices and of popular governments. Nothing of the warmth of genuine patriotism is lost by Roman training, for the place itself recalls to memory the most thrilling scenes of Roman history, and the paternal rule of the Pontiff over the small territory which has been providentially attached to his See, does not lead them to prefer any form of civil government.

We feel, by this statement, the surveys kingdoms and republics, and admires in the variety of social institutions, divine Providence, which reaches from end to end powerfully, and disposes all things sweetly, for its own high purpose. Moreover, the students of the College will enter it at an age when their national feelings have been fully developed, which they are not likely to change during the few years which are devoted to the higher studies that immediately prepare them for the ministry. Such of our priests and prelates as have been educated in the Eternal City, yield to none of their brethren in devoted attachment to the free institutions under which it is our happiness to live.

The ecclesiastical seminaries which exist in our dioceses, under the diligent supervision of the priests of the Society of St. Sulpice, and the seminary department of the College of Mount St. Mary's, near Emmitsburg, efficiently conducted by secular clergymen, have rendered to the Church most important services in the many exemplary priests whom they have trained, several of whom have ascended the episcopacy. Their usefulness is greatly increased, since the former are now wholly devoted to ecclesiastical education, and the number of students within their walls gives promise of a large supply of evangelical laborers to reap the harvest which is ripe for the sickle. We would not, by any means, lessen the interest which you justly feel in these domestic institutions. On the contrary, we willingly acknowledge the special advantages which they possess, as is evident from the success with which their efforts have been crowned. But the proposed College at Rome will in no wise interfere with their prosperity. Many youths will be attracted to the Holy City by its various religious associations, the distance from their homes will free them from the distractions which relations and friends sometimes place in their way, and their young temptations to return to secular pursuits. Their education in the metropolis of the Christian world will be a new link to bind us to the source of unity.

Returning thence with the blessing of him who fills the chair of Peter, they will unite with their brethren trained in our seminaries, or religious communities, in laboring for the diffusion of the faith, and a holy zeal of zeal and devotedness will thus be created. The beauty of Catholic doctrine will appear to advantage by comparing the teaching of the missionaries brought up in various institutions with the tradition which has been preserved in the most ancient and glorious Church founded by the Apostles Peter and Paul, and the blessings of unity will be made manifest.

On the first intimation of the intention of Our Holy Father to establish an American College at Rome, several wealthy individuals in our diocese generously offered to contribute $1,000 each towards this noble object. We earnestly solicit those of our flock who may be able to make this large donation, to place it as soon as possible in our hands, that an impulse may be given to the good work.

Although the vast building appropriated by the Roman Pontiff to our use costs us nothing, a large amount of money must be expended in adapting it to the purposes of a College, and a fund must be created to support the various officers and students. We, therefore, exhort you to give freely of those goods of which Divine Providence has constituted you dispensers; but, we do not mean to limit or determine the amount of your offerings.

Whatever you may please to bestow will be thankfully accepted, and your name shall be inscribed on the books of the College, among its first benefactors, that you may share the prayers of its inmates, and your children may have a claim for admission, in case they feel called to enter into the ecclesiastical state. In order that all the faithful of our diocese may have an opportunity of uniting in this great work, we have appointed the Sunday within the octave of the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, which will be the 12th day of December, for the same purpose.

Brethren, pray that God may prosper the undertaking by His blessing, and call to his holy ministry youth of innocence and piety, and give us pastors according to His own heart, to feed us with knowledge and doctrine.

Given under our hand at Baltimore this 10th day of October, in the year of our Lord 1858.

✠ FRANCIS PATRICK,
Archbishop of Baltimore.

THOMAS FOLEY, Secretary.

A BOLD FRAUD.—We stated a day or two since, that the State Department at Washington had reason to apprehend the existence of an attempted fraud of extraordinary character, perpetrated upon our citizens. We have been put in possession of a bit of evidence in relation to it by SAMUEL LAWRENCE, Esq., of our city. This gentleman received a letter dated "Charing Cross Office, Trafalgar-square, London, 6th August, 1858," and signed "John Micheloni." The writer desired to communicate with Mr. L. in relation to a very considerable property now lying in chancery in the English Court of Chancery, and requiring a claimant; he professed to be a court agent, and proposed to search family records through many years, gratuitously, in the estate, valued at about $10,000. This opening information is accompanied with a request to send him $25, as to confirm and validate the right it will be necessary to obtain copies of certain old wills and documents now locked up in the archives of the court. The cunning rogue particularly desires to have the Christian name of Grandfather Lawrence, and his mother's maiden name, though he already knows them, but wants the written testimony of the heir apparent. The whole tone of the letter is business-like, and calculated to deceive, but Mr. Lawrence did not fall into the trap. On the contrary, he has discovered that the letter is a mere counterfeit, copies of which have been sent to other gentlemen of our State, with the mere change of names. The money in which Mr. Micheloni has obtained the amount of national Kentucky

Notes on Washington Territory.

A correspondent in the Sacramento Bee, who professes to write in a great measure from personal knowledge, and at the same time "not for pay or newspaper notoriety," gives the first part of a "Sketch of Washington Territory," as follows:

The Territory is bounded on the North by that part of British America, of late called Columbia; on the East by the Rocky Mountains, which separate it from Nebraska; on the South by Oregon, and on the West by the Pacific Ocean. Its area is 113,620 square miles—nearly twice the area of the State of Virginia. It extends from 46° to 49° of north latitude, and from 112° to 124° of longitude west from Greenwich. Its width is therefore about 207 statute miles, and its greatest length is about 550 miles. Antecedent to the settlement of the Northwest boundary question between the United States and Great Britain, during President Polk's Administration, the region of the country which is now Washington Territory, was then claimed to be British soil, and was called by the Hudson's Bay Company, New-Georgia. From the settlement of the boundary question until the year 1853, it constituted a part of Oregon. In the latter year the Territory of Oregon was, by act of Congress, divided, and a Territorial Government for the Territory of Washington was established. Previous to the late influx, the population of the Territory was estimated at 3,000 souls.

The present organized counties of Washington Territory are fifteen, named as follows: Clallam, Island, Kawamish, Chehalite, Pacific, Wahkiacum, Cowlitz, Clarke, Skamania, Lewis, Thurston, Pierce, Jefferson, King, Whatcom and Walla-Walla.

The Cascade Mountains, which appear to be a continuation of the Sierra Nevada chain, extend across the country from North to South, nearly parallel with the coast, and about 150 miles east of it. Mount Baker, in this chain, is but a short distance south of Fraser's River, and its summit is 17,000 feet above the level of the sea. The average altitude of the Cascades, however, cannot be much above 7,000 feet, while the Snoqualmie Pass in the same chain, is only 3,300 feet above tide water. The Olympic Mountains, another lofty chain, extend North and South across the Westerly end of the Territory, but at some distance east of the coast. These mountains commence to rise a short distance north of the Columbia River, and terminates at the Straits of San Juan de Fuca. Another range of low mountains, called the Cœur d'Alnes, crosses the country parallel with, and about one hundred miles west of, the Rocky Mountains.

The rivers are numerous. The principal ones are all, however, east of the Cascade Mountains, and drain the great valley which lies between those and the Rocky Mountains. Those rivers are the Columbia and its infinite number of branches, the Yackima, and the Bitter Root. The valley which lies on both sides of the Sound, between the Olympic and Cascade Mountains, is drained by an almost endless number of limpid streams, but, with two exceptions, too rapid and shallow for navigation.

The great inland sea which penetrates in all directions that portion of the territory lying west of the Cascade Mountains, is one of the most remarkable sheets of water in the world. This remarkable body of water extends inland and parallel with the main ocean coast, from Puget's Sound, in 46° 20' N., to Lynn Canal, in Russian America, in 56° N., a distance of nine hundred miles. Its average width is about fifty miles, and it is connected with the ocean by the Straits of Fuca, Queen Charlotte's Sound, Dixon's Entrance, Clarence Straits, affording in almost any of these latitudes an easy and safe ingress and egress to the largest ships in the world. That portion of this sheet of water which lies in American territory is completely mottled up with islands, a portion of which are exceedingly fertile and valuable, but the major part of which are dry, rocky and barren. The beholder, on viewing the confusion with which those small islands are strewn about, here and there, for the first time in his life, perhaps, becomes impressed with the idea that Nature, when she formed that country, must have been in a fitful mood, and paid no regard to order, the most favorite of all her laws.

THE COOLIE TRADE.—The Rev. W. C. BURNS, in a letter dated from Swatow, gives an account of the Coolie trade as carried on even by English vessels, which, if the fact be as he considers, demands immediate attention and inquiry. It is unjust to attack the French for their emigration scheme on the African Coast, if we are ourselves engaged in similar adventures in China: "I have nothing of special interest to add, if I except what I may state about the Coolie trade, viz., that it is becoming more and more assimilated to Slavery. The natives are not only decoyed away under false pretences, but are even kidnapped and sold, as on the Coast of Africa. A man was put to death a week or two ago, by crucifixion, for decoying persons away as Coolies, and at present there are proclamations on the walls, both from the magistrates and from the people, offering rewards for the apprehension of all who are engaged in a similar way. It is melancholy to see English vessels engaged in such a traffic. The Scotia screw-steamer is here for Coolies now—for, although vessels carrying the British flag are obliged to put into Hong Kong, and be examined in regard to the willingness to go of those on board, there is reason to believe that when the unwilling are dismissed by the English authorities, they are often, if not always, held fast by the native brokers and embarked in vessels carrying a different flag, and subject to no such inspection. Here, at Double Island, the case is undoubtedly so; for, when the Captains of ships decline taking persons who show evident signs of being on board against their will, the native Coolie agents take them on shore and hold them as prisoners. Many also are afraid, when asked, to say that they are unwilling to go, feeling themselves in the power of their countrymen, who can add cruelty to imprisonment, and that without the possibility of an appeal to any other party. It is high time the attention of the British Government was drawn to this traffic, and that measures for controlling it were devised, which should extend to vessels carrying other flags than that of England.

STATISTICS OF SUICIDE.—Mr. BUCKLE has asserted, in his able and interesting recent work on Civilization, that the number of suicides is a "constant quantity"—in other words, that suicides, like other so-called "crimes," occur very regularly. In the five years, 1852-56, it is shown by the Registrar-General of England that 5,415 persons put a period to their earthly career by self-destruction, viz.: 3,886 males and 1,529 females. The annual average of male suicides is 777·2, and that of females 305·6. The general average shows that upwards of 1,000 persons (1,083·8) put an end to their sufferings by committing suicide in every year of grace. The lowest number of suicides was 1,931, (in 1855,) and the highest 1,189, (in 1856.) Poisoning being the easiest, is a common, but by no means a general means, of self-destruction. The favorite poisons are arsenic, opium, laudanum, (the tincture of opium,) prussic acid, (the most rapid in its action,) and essential oil of bitter almonds. It is a remarkable fact that female suicides manifest a strange predilection for the very painful irritant poison called oxalic acids. As many as 24 were so foolish as to choose this compound of oxygen and carbon, while only 15 males resorted to it. On the other hand, 67 men resorted to hydrocyanic acid, and 23 to the oil of bitter almonds, while only 8 women had resolution to swallow the former fatal poison, and 16 the latter. Strychnia was used by one man and one woman, and in one case camphor was used. But hanging is by far the most general mode of suicide, for nearly half of the annual average of suicides terminate their miserable lives by suspension. Cut-threats and drowning stand next in the order of frequency; 8-10ths of all the suicides are committed in one of these three ways. Asphyxia proper, or suffocation by the fumes of charcoal, is by no means a favorite mode of suicide here as in France. The greatest number of suicides occur between the ages of 25 and 45. 23 persons of both sexes committed suicide at 10 years of age, and 14 persons of both sexes at the age of 85.—London Times.

MURDER IN PHILADELPHIA.—The Philadelphia Press of yesterday says: "In the Fifteenth Ward, yesterday morning, a fracas occurred between several Irishmen, at a small drinking house, which resulted in the death of a laborer named WM. MCNEELIS. The locality of the occurrence was No. 1,708 Carlton-street, near Vine, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth. The parties concerned were all acquaintances, but Saturday night, while under the influence of liquor, one of them, named HANNAH MURRAY, struck McNEELIS a violent blow, which very much disfigured his face. On yesterday morning the parties again met at the tavern, which is kept by one THOMAS BOYLE. Boyle treated them all to a single glass of spirits, when McNEELIS, who appears to have still been intoxicated, boasted of his ability to thrash MURRAY. The latter had previously displayed a large knife, and, coming into collision with McNEELIS, that unfortunate person received the knife under the ear, and fell dead upon the spot."

"MUSCLE MEN."—It may not be out of place to remind those of our young men who are longing for the emoluments attendant upon a pugilistic victory, that those gentlemen who follow the "manly art" as a profession generally come to a bad end. The father of Mr. T. HYER, who enjoyed the distinguished honor of participating in the first ring-fight in the United States, died of too much liquor; BENJAMIN RAY died of too much fight; WILLIAM POOLE died of too much bullet; PATHEEN died of too much stab; YANKEE SULLIVAN died of too much Vigilance Committee, and they are continually dropping off, coming to a violent and disgraceful end, unhonored and unscored-for. Avoid, therefore, the prize-ring, not merely as actors, but as spectators. Black boots—become an itinerant dealer in tin ware, or a woman's rights lecturer—sell peanuts—study law, or become a local editor, but don't for the sake of yourselves or friends become a pugilist.—Cleveland Plaindealer.

The Boston Traveller, of yesterday, says: "Letters recently received from Mr. Sumner represent his health as being considerably improved. He writes that the physicians at Aix will probably attribute his improvement to the baths; Dr. Brown Sequard will think it is the result of the mass, and his friends at home may suppose that relaxation from labor is the cause; but of the fact that he is much improved in health there is no doubt. He was about leaving Aix for Paris when last heard from." The Boston Herald has the following: "A New-Bedford gentleman, who has recently returned from Europe, states it to be the opinion of Mr. Sumner's physicians that he will never recover from the effect of the injuries from which he has been suffering for over two years. His mental and physical system is much shaken, and, although he may survive for years, there is little probability that he will ever be able to resume the duties of public life."

MONDAY, Nov. 8—P. M.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the week past, ending Saturday, Nov. 6—the particulars of which are advertised by each Bank separately on another page of this paper—present, in the aggregate, the following changes from the previous weekly statement of Oct. 30:

Increase in Loans	$715,907
Decrease in Specie	370,462
Increase in Circulation	363,944
Increase in Gross Deposits	416,242
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	21,556

Including the Clearing-House operations of the week, which show the interexchanges between the Banks, and including also the Sub-Treasury statement of Saturday, the following is the general comparison with the previous exhibit and also with the movement this time last season:

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	Nov 7, 1857.	Nov 6, 1858.	Oct. 30, 1858.
Capital	$63,519,000	$67,734,755	$67,734,755
Loans	95,866,241	126,809,493	126,093,586
Specie	16,492,152	26,337,355	26,707,817
Circulation	6,434,312	6,186,023	7,822,960
Gross Deposits	68,884,773	109,217,448	108,801,206
Exchanged	12,459,966	21,889,506	21,494,870
Undrawn	56,424,807	87,327,942	87,306,386
In Sub-Treasury	5,407,585	8,256,642	9,151,581

The Specie average on the present return is consistent with the reported Gold movements of the week. The Sub-Treasury supplied a good share of the remittances South, and these altogether were less important than the week before. It seems, however, that the Street calculated upon a much larger falling off. The Discount line, in the aggregate, shows a moderate increase. Some few of the large Banks reduce their return on account of the heavy Specie drafts made against their Southern bank balances. Notwithstanding these drafts, the General Deposit line keeps up to the high figures of October, showing an increase in local balances. The Circulation, as usual on quarter day, (Nov. 1,) runs up temporarily a few hundred thousand dollars.

In Money, to-day, we hear of temporary loans at 3 ✠ cent., without notice, and 4 ✠ cent. on 30@60 days, on first-class stock collateral, and to the old-established Brokers, and 4 ✠ cent., at call, on miscellaneous collateral. The Discount Brokers are passing prime 30@60-day acceptances at 4 ✠ cent., and other first-class paper, having 90 days to 5 months to run, at 5@6 ✠ cent. The market is easy, both at Bank and on the Street. The Exchange dealings for the Persia, sailing on Wednesday, have scarcely yet taken shape. The rates both English and Continental are much unsettled, to-day, owing to the downward tendency of the market. Transient Bank bills and Bank indorsements on London are called 109¾@108¾ ✠ cent., and most of the standard Bankers here are disposed to meet the demand at 109¾ ✠ cent. Merchant bills are 108¾@109 ✠ cent. Francs have dropped to 5 17½f.@5 15f. to the dollar, and North of Europe Exchange has declined in proportion. The demand on all points from the importers is thus far but moderate, though more business may show itself to-morrow. The Sub-Treasury balance falls off $40,164 to-day; present figures, $8,215,868.

The Stock market opened with a pretty steady feeling this morning, and as the demand increased with the progress of the list, prices began to display some firmness. The dealings in New-York Central took the lead, and the stock, in the afternoon, advanced to 84 ✠ cent., closing 84 bid. The depression in Galena, noticed at the close of last week, brought forward some new buyers, and 77 ✠ cent. was paid in the afternoon, as against 75¾ at the close of Saturday. There was also a steadier tone in the demand for Rock Island shares. Reading firm in the afternoon at 51½ ✠ cent.; Panama 119¾ ✠ cent. Some sales of Pacific Mail were made at a concession of 1@1½ ✠ cent. The Stockholders meet on the 10th inst. to elect their managers for the ensuing year. The present Board have not yet made the November dividend, and the lower sales of the Stock this afternoon were probably based on the suspicion that the extent of dividend will be made to turn upon some new arrangement with MR. VANDERBILT for his steamers on the Pacific. The actual holders of the stock had best inquire of, (or perhaps advise with,) the President and Directors on this subject before acting upon any Street rumor of a short dividend. In State Stocks the demand was steady and prices firm. The Railway Bonds were better for La Crosse Land Grants and Erie third mortgages. Some doubt has been thrown on the mortgage security on the road of the La Crosse Land Grant Bonds, and to this the sudden decline last week is attributed by an afternoon paper. On inquiry at the Transfer office here we cannot hear of any irregularity as to the mortgage, which is a first lien upon the Western Section of the road, as well as the lands acquired from Congress, through the State of Wisconsin. The President and Mr. BOURNE of the Board of the Company, and Mr. KNAPP of the Mechanics', and Judge BRONSON. The General Market held off firm at 4 o'clock.

The probability of reopening the question of selling the New-York Central and New-York and Erie Roads in the next Legislature is suggested by one or more of our cotemporaries, as against the future value of these stocks, more particularly Central. This probability scarcely, in truth, amounts to a possibility with the State administration just elected. Neither Gov. MORGAN nor the Republican Assembly are likely to hear to such a blind policy against the trade of New-York City, to say nothing of their respect for the Railway property of the State. Besides, the Senate, of last year, which rejected the proposition in every shape, holds over to the next session.

The Hudson River Railroad earned in October, $140,800, against $141,628 same month last year. After providing for the damages caused by the Fishkill collision, the expenses of the road fall about $5,000 behind the same month last year
